

Pentagon Papers case thrown out

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

The Pentagon papers trial judge dismissed all charges against Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo Friday, declaring that extraordinary misconduct by the government had irreparably damaged the defendants' right to a fair trial.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne made it clear he was dismissing the conspiracy, espionage and theft charges "with prejudice" — meaning that he was preventing another trial of the defendants on the same charges.

Asked whether the government would seek to pursue prosecution of the two, an assistant prosecutor, Warren Reese, said, "It's dead."

Byrne's decision followed disclosures that the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist had been broken into with the knowledge of White House staff members and that Ellsberg had been overheard in federal wiretaps. In addition to dismissing the charges, the judge declared a mistrial.

"The conduct of the government has placed this case in such a posture it precludes the fair and dispassionate consideration of issues by the jury," Byrne said.

At Camp David, Md., where President Nixon was spending the Mother's Day weekend, a White House spokesman had no comment on the dismissal.

The judge discharged the jury later Friday and of nine who commented on the case several said they thought the trial would have ended in acquittal. None said he would have voted guilty had the jury received the case.

After the decision was announced, Ellsberg told newsmen he plans numerous suits, including one against President Nixon.

"We will bring suit against all the conspirators, of which the President appears to be the ringleader," Ellsberg said. "The President has led a conspiracy to deprive us of our civil liberties."

Ellsberg and Russo said they did not regret having released the Pentagon papers, which led to the two years of litigation.

"We think that we had to tell the truth to the American people," Ellsberg said. "Tony and I did something right in our lives."

Ellsberg and Russo first came to trial in July 1972 in connection with the copying of the secret study of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war. A mistrial was declared in December, however, and the second trial began in January.

Cheering broke out in the courtroom after the judge read his prepared decision. Ellsberg arose and hugged his wife Patricia and there were shrieks of happiness from the group of young legal aides who had assisted the defense nearly from the time of Ellsberg's indictment in 1971.

"As the record makes clear, I have attempted to require the government and allow the defendants to develop all information available on the issues disclosed here," Byrne said.

But he said the government had moved too slowly and "there remained more questions than there are answers."

The judge said he was dismissing the case not solely because of the wiretap disclosure but on "the information that has been presented in the last several days."

Byrne said earlier he was considering possible dismissal on grounds raised as result of two government revelations — that the psychiatrist's office had been burglarized by Watergate conspirators and that Ellsberg had been overheard on wiretaps never disclosed to the court before.

Gray-Nixon talk of scandal claimed

WASHINGTON (AP) — L. Patrick Gray III, former acting FBI director, told President Nixon of high-level White House involvement in the Watergate case shortly after the break-in, the Baltimore Sun has reported.

The paper reported in its today's editions that the federal sources said Gray asserted he received "no reaction" from the President when he told him of his concern that the FBI and CIA were being "used" in the Watergate cover-up.

The paper said Gray reportedly pinpointed his first awareness of the White House links to the cover-up 10 days after the June 17, 1971, break-in at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate complex.

Quoting sources, the Sun said Gray telephoned Nixon directly to voice his concern about the White House involvement.

Similar accounts were reported by ABC television and the New York Daily News. ABC said Friday that Gray has told government investigators he told the President last July 6 that White House aides were trying to impede the Watergate investigation. The network also cited sources as the basis for its report.

The account in the News said Gray told the Senate investigators he had called a meeting between top FBI and CIA executives for June 28, 11 days after the break-in at Democratic national headquarters. Gray called that meeting, the News quoted him as saying, because FBI agents were suspicious of CIA involvement in Watergate.

The morning of June 28, several hours before the meeting was scheduled, Gray was told by Ehrlichman that, "I've canceled your meeting," the News account of Gray's Senate testimony said.

The newspaper quotes Gray as telling Senate investigators that he tried to impress upon Ehrlichman his suspicions of CIA involvement and of the possibility that secret funds given to the Nixon re-election effort may have been CIA money. Ehrlichman still refused to permit the meeting, the News quotes Gray as saying.

Gray is quoted as having told MacGregor he was "convinced" the FBI and CIA were being "used and abused" by "persons around the President." Gray is said to have urged MacGregor, who was then in charge of the re-election committee, to tell Nixon of those suspicions. It was one day later that ABC says Gray made the revelations to Nixon.

The News said Mrs. MacGregor recalled in a conversation with the newspaper on Friday that the July 5 conversation between her husband and Gray was "agitated, but I had the impression he was going to wait until I returned before talking to me."

MacGregor told the News that Gray did not mention Ehrlichman or the CIA, in the conversation, but said he did not remember the specifics "because I don't keep logs of phone conversations." He said Gray did not ask him to talk to Nixon about anything.

"It's ridiculous to assert Gray brought his suspicions to me about being handicapped on his own job," the News quotes MacGregor as saying. "I had nothing to do with the investigation. You should ask him what he said to his boss, Dick Kleindienst, then the attorney general."

Confrontation with Congress seen

U.S. to continue Cambodia raids

By Bernard Gwertzman

WASHINGTON — The White House said Friday that the United States would continue with "the right policy" of bombing in Cambodia in support of the Lon Nol government, despite Thursday's vote in the House of Representatives blocking the use of defense funds for such raids.

Ronald Ziegler, the White House press secretary, also announced — jointly with North Vietnam — that Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho, Hanoi's chief Vietnam negotiator, would resume talks on Thursday in Paris to seek ways of achieving "strict implementation" of the 3½-months-old cease-fire.

The administration was apparently heading for a possible constitutional conflict with Congress, if the Senate, as expected, supports the House action next week.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield told a group of newsmen Friday that "if the will of the Congress and the intention of the Congress — the representatives of the people — are not adhered to, then we will face a true constitutional crisis. One thing this country cannot afford at this time is a constitutional crisis."

To those who urged that any action be postponed until after Kissinger completes his talks with Tho, Mansfield said:

"My sympathies are with Mr. Kissinger. My hopes are with Mr. Kissinger, but I don't think we should delay exercising our responsibilities."

Thursday, the house voted 219 to 188 to block the use of defense funds for the continued bombing.

"We, of course, observed the vote in the Congress yesterday (Thursday)," Ziegler said, adding:

"We will continue with the policy which we feel is the right policy, and that is to provide support to the government of Cambodia at their request. If at some time in

Nixon, Agnew urged to quit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the strongest reaction in Congress yet to the Watergate scandal, Rep. Henry S. Reuss said Friday that President Nixon and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew should consider resigning to permit House Speaker Carl Albert, who would become President, to set up a coalition government.

The Senate Watergate committee, meanwhile, told U.S. District Court that it has evidence that unnamed White House aides "illegally and improperly removed and destroyed records and documents" in the Watergate investigation.

The committee also asked Chief Judge John J. Sirica to turn over the keys to the safety deposit box in which ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean III placed Watergate documents that he removed shortly before he resigned.

REUSS, a Wisconsin Democrat, suggested that with Nixon and Agnew voluntarily out of office, Albert could assume the presidency under the constitutional authority which makes the speaker of the House the next man in line. Then, said Reuss, he could put together a bipartisan administration.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield had no comment. Most other congressional leaders had already left town for the weekend.

At least 50 members of Congress have made inquiries at the Library of Congress about impeachment proceedings, and two, Reps. John E. Moss, D-Calif., and Bella S. Abzug, D-N.Y., have called for a House inquiry into impeachment. But no one yet had made a suggestion as startling as Reuss.

Food basket cost at new high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The annual average retail cost of a typical household food market basket during the first three months of 1973 climbed to a record rate of $1,414, the government reported Friday.

The Agriculture Department also said the farmers' share of the cost rose to the highest level in 18 years, with growers getting 43 cents out of every food dollar.

The cost of the market basket, which covers domestic farm-produced foods needed to supply a hypothetical household of 3.2 persons for one year, was up 6.3 per cent from the last quarter of 1972 and 9.5 per cent over the final quarter of 1971.

The figures are not a precise indicator of total food costs because they do not cover imported items like coffee, nor do they include nonfarm items such as fish.

The report said the return to farmers was 21 per cent higher than the corresponding period in 1972, indicating that rising retail farm prices were responsible for much of the increase in retail prices.

The department's economists said that the farmer's 43-cent share of the consumer food dollar contrasted with a 40-cent return to farmers in the last quarter of 1972 and a 39-cent return in the first quarter of last year.

The 43-cent share, the report said, was the highest for farmers since the first quarter of 1955, but still below the record of 53 cents set in the last quarter of 1947.

A spokesman for the American National Cattlemen's Association told a press conference that food prices were not likely to return to their comparatively low levels before 1972 as long as inflation continues to make farm production increasingly costly.

Bill Webster, a feedlot operator from Greeley, Colo., said lower feed grain prices would help, but other offsetting factors were at work, including bad weather and the recent government ban on use of DES, a chemical cattle growth stimulant.

Webster said the DES ban would reduce cattle production by a million head a year.

Skylab gets set; medics OK crew

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Writer

CAPE KENNEDY — The first three astronauts who will man America's space station passed their last major medical exam Friday while the countdown rolled along smoothly toward Monday's launch of the house-sized Skylab.

Dr. Royce Hawkins said the day-long physicals at the Johnson Space Center in Houston confirmed that astronauts Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph P.

Skylab, its crew and its mission; stories and photos on Page C-12.

Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz were in top shape.

The pilots will take off in an Apollo ferry ship Tuesday, a day after Skylab is put into a 269-mile-high orbit. They are scheduled to spend a record 28 days aboard the laboratory, carrying out 89 scientific experiments.

"We feel confident the crew is ready to fly," Hawkins said. "We saw no medical problems that would impact Tuesday's launch."

Forecasters predicted good weather for Skylab's 10:30 a.m. PDT launch and favorable conditions for the flight Tuesday. The Monday forecast called for partly cloudy skies, 10 mph southerly winds and 84 degree temperatures for takeoff.

Besides checking the health of the pilots for their marathon mission, physicians gathered detailed basic medical data on them that will be compared with results during the flight and similar tests after splashdown June 12.

The two countdowns were proceeding without a hitch, with the pace of preparations picking up Friday as engineers pumped liquid oxygen and hydrogen into the Apollo ferry ship. The oxygen and hydrogen will fuel the ship's electric generators and the oxygen also will be used for breathing.

One of the prime objectives of the $2.5 million, eight-month project is to see how prolonged exposure to weightlessness in space affects a man's vital systems and his ability to work. Friday's medical tests duplicated tests that will be carried out aboard Skylab for the first time.

Americans have spent no more than 14 days in space at one time. Three Russians lived in orbit nearly 24 days, but died in a spacecraft pressurization accident.

It was also on June 28 that he received in Ehrlichman's office from former White House counsel John W. Dean III two file folders and was told "these should never see the light of day." Gray told the Senate investigators that he took the files to his Connecticut home and kept them hidden for six months, burning them over the Christmas holidays without ever having looked at them.

That report contradicts earlier statements from Sen. Lowell P. Weicker of

Rogers begins tour to thaw Latin ties

Combined News Services

Secretary of State William P. Rogers received final White House instructions Friday before leaving on a 17-day Latin American tour that is intended to melt some of the ice that has covered hemispheric relations with Washington during the past four years.

President Nixon, who says he plans to visit Latin America later this year, bid Rogers farewell during a brief meeting at the White House. Rogers is to fly to Mexico today from Washington.

Rogers' talks during the tour were expected to stress economic matters — foreign investment and trade in Mexico and Brazil to petroleum in Venezuela, nationalizations of U.S. firms in Peru, development assistance in Colombia and Jamaica, and reconstruction aid for earthquake-devastated Managua, Nicaragua.

The tour is the most extensive by a presidential representative since New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller visited 20 countries in 1969 and ran into repeated instances of violence and demonstrations. Rogers hopes to avoid that by limiting himself to eight countries and by emphasizing the administration's swing away from old-style Uncle Sam paternalism.

Rogers has been to Mexico and Costa Rica, but never to South America during almost 52 months in office.

The theme was set by Nixon recently in his state of the world message when he said the United States wanted a mature partnership in which Latin American countries "would assume increasing responsibility for ideas, for initiatives and for actions."

Settled

Marina Oswald Porter, widow of President Kennedy's accused assassin, won a settlement of $17,729 from the government Friday for property that belonged to Lee Harvey Oswald.

U.S. District Court Judge Joe Estes signed the judgment in Dallas, Tex.

Asst. U.S. Attorney Ken Mighell had argued the government should pay only $3,000 for the confiscated property because it would be "unjust enrichment" if Mrs. Porter profited by her husband's wrongdoing. As part of the settlement, Mrs. Porter agreed to drop a second suit seeking an additional $60,000 in damages because FBI agents had damaged certain letters and documents by submitting them to chemical analysis.

Editor

Abel Green, who as the editor of Variety knew and reported the news of the great, the near-great and the unknowns of Broadway and Hollywood, died of a heart attack Friday at his home in New York. He was 72 years old.

Green was the second editor of the showbiz weekly, succeeding Sim Silverman in 1933 after a career that began in 1918.

Of course

Norton Simon, the West Coast industrialist and art collector, said Friday he paid $1 million for a masterpiece bronze sculpture of a Hindu deity that Indian government officials say was stolen from a South Indian temple and smuggled out of India.

"Hell yes, it was smuggled," said Simon in a telephone interview. "I spent between $15 and $16 million over the last year on Asian art and most of it was smuggled. I don't know whether it was stolen."

India forbids the illegal exportation of art works. But works of art can enter this country legally, whether smuggled or not, as long as they are declared and cleared at U.S. customs. "I have clear title to this piece," said Simon. "It entered America legally."

New storms stun Midwest states

Tornadoes and 100-mile-an-hour winds battered scores of towns in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma Friday, spreading death and damage just hours after 30 twisters slammed through Ohio and violent weather struck five other states. At least seven persons were killed, 250 injured and some were missing. Damage soared into the millions of dollars. Three persons were killed at Joplin, Mo., where sirens shrieked the arrival of a tornado that knocked down buildings and shredded house trailers, cars, trees and power lines. At least 85 persons were injured at Joplin. The Ohio tornadoes Thursday night killed four persons and injured another 150. Violent weather caused some damage and injuries in Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. Clocked winds at 100 miles an hour. No one was injured in Oklahoma.

U.S. blamed for vandalism

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — American Indian Movement leader Russell Means blamed the federal government Friday for the widespread property damage at Wounded Knee. Homes in the Pine Ridge Reservation village were found destroyed after a 10-week occupation by members of AIM and militant Indians. Other homes had been looted and extensively damaged. "The United States government delayed the return of the original residents by 24 hours in order for their forces to vandalize and steal from the original residents of Wounded Knee in order to make it appear that the occupiers had done these terrible acts to their own people, thereby creating further division among our people," Means said.

Car dealers fight smog rule

SACRAMENTO — A Sacramento-area new-car dealers organization said Friday it will go to court to challenge the legality of making California a "guinea pig" for catalytic converter antismog devices in 1975 models to be sold in the state. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus has allowed automakers a one-year delay until 1976 in equipping all American cars with the catalytic device, but said the system must be installed on all vehicles sold in California in 1975.

Suburb segregation rises

BOSTON — Racial segregation in most of the nation's suburbs increased between 1960 and 1969 despite legislation aimed at helping blacks move out of city clumps, according to federal economists. Only two areas decreased — Los Angeles and New York. Northern suburbs are significantly more closed to blacks than the suburbs of southern cities, the economists said, even though southern suburbs showed a firm shift toward segregation during the decade.

Bonn parliament OKs East treaty

BONN — The West German parliament Friday approved a good-neighbor treaty establishing relations with East Germany. Chancellor Willy Brandt said it reflected "postwar reality" in Central Europe. The parliament also voted in favor of U.N. membership for both East and West Germany. The parliamentary actions fulfilled the major condition set by Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev for his visit to Bonn scheduled to begin May 18. Meanwhile, Brezhnev was greeted with bear hugs and kisses as he arrived in Warsaw Friday for talks just 24 hours before his summit meeting today in East Germany. Both Poland and East Germany are closely tied up with the problems of East-West detente to be discussed by Brezhnev and Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Cambodia bomb raids

PHNOM PENH — American warplanes flew raids over broad areas of Cambodia Friday within 24 hours after the U.S. House of Representatives voted to block further use of defense funds for continued bombing of the country. The House action Thursday in Washington is still subject to Senate approval and a possible confrontation thereafter between Congress and President Nixon about the war powers of the chief executive. Meantime, two helicopters from the Joint Military Commission were forced down by anti-aircraft fire Friday in South Vietnam and the Viet Cong detained their occupants at gunpoint for three hours before releasing them, the South Vietnamese Command said. Aboard the craft were eight Viet Cong officers, two South Vietnamese liaison officers and eight government air crewmen.

Tarzan

Lex Barker, who succeeded Johnny Weissmuller as Hollywood's Tarzan of the Apes, collapsed and died on New York's East Side Friday. He had celebrated his 53rd birthday Tuesday.

Often-married, Barker's ex-wives included movie beauties Arlene Dahl and Lana Turner.

Barker was 29 years old, a handsome 6-foot-4 and 200 pounds when in 1948 he became Hollywood's 10th Tarzan. He had been a movie bit player.

Tired of trying to hold his stomach in, as he put it, Barker changed studios, and fashioned a brief career as a western star. The films did well, cashing in on his fame as Tarzan overseas.

In the late 1950s, Barker left movie-making in this country and went on to become one of Rome's busiest actors.

Darin

Singer Bobby Darin has been hospitalized for treatment of a blood stream infection, a spokesman said Friday in Los Angeles. Darin's spokesman said the 36-year-old entertainer will spend two to three weeks at Century City Hospital here for treatment of septicemia.

Darin, who once underwent open heart surgery, gained fame as a rock singer in the 1950s. Recently he has hosted his own network television show.

Oldest

The widow of a balck sharecropper was presented with 112 roses Friday after her selection in a nationwide contest as the "oldest mon" in the country.

The roses were presented in Natchez, Miss., to Mrs. Lillie Rumbles, who is 112 years old, as part of a Mother's Day salute sponsored by a restaurant chain.

Mrs. Rumbles, whose husband died about 30 years ago, was born in 1861 near the little town of Church Hill where she lived until about five years ago. She now lives in a rest home.

Her only son also is deceased, but she has five grandchildren, 18 great-grandchildren and more than 50 great-grandchildren.

Delectable

Brooklyn College in New York has awarded Harry Theodore an honorary degree of doctor of delectables, in recognition of the 25 years he's spent selling pretzels, hot dogs and ice cream to students. But he still isn't quite satisfied.

Harry sells his goods from a truck, which he parks in a no-parking zone just off the campus. The result is harassment and summonses from police.

"Now," said the new doctor, "if the school would just give me little place inside the campus, why I'd have it made."

Singer

Vaughn Monroe, singing bandleader of the 1940s whose theme song was "Racing to the Moon," was in critical condition Friday in Martin County Memorial Hospital in Stuart, Fla., his wife said.

Mrs. Monroe said her husband, 62, entered the hospital and underwent surgery on Tuesday after suffering a stomach ailment. "He became very ill and was hemorrhaging internally," she said.

Monroe, who makes his home in Stuart, has been performing 10 months out of the year at night clubs and special events around the country.

Wed again

Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn and his second wife were married a second time Friday in a church ceremony, friends of the Nobel Prize-winning author said.

Solzhenitsyn wed Natalya Svetlova, the mother of his two sons, April 20 in a civil ceremony, which is required in the officially atheist Soviet Union. Solzhenitsyn, 54, is a devout Christian.

The author of "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" and "August 1914" has been living with the attractive scientist, who is in her thirties, for the past three years.

Rosenbergs

The two surviving sons of the condemned atomic-secrets spies, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, demanded Friday that Doubleday & Co. recall all copies of its best-selling book, "The Implosion Conspiracy," because it contains letters published without family permission.

Michael and Robert Rosenberg, warning of possible court action, asked the publisher and author Louis Nizer to delete the letters from the book and to apologize for their "unlawful use."

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were convicted of passing atomic-energy secrets to the Russians and were electrocuted for treason on June 19, 1953.

James McGrath, general counsel to Doubleday, said he had not yet received the Rosenbergs' request and could not discuss the allegation until he had all the facts. Nizer was not available for comment.

Strip tease?

I contacted the Los Angeles County Department of Real Estate Management in August, 1970 about buying a strip of excess land adjacent to our property.

GRAFFITI

A MAN WHO CAN READ HIS WIFE LIKE A BOOK IS ILLITERATE

I've called the department several times since then and have never been able to get a price on the land. Can you get us some action on this? Mrs. J.O.S., Long Beach.

Yes. The property, which was declared excess by the county, has now been appraised at $3,500 and certified letters about it have been mailed to you and a neighbor whose property is also adjacent to the strip. Either of you can buy it for that amount but if you both want it or if neither of you are willing to pay that price the property will be offered at a public auction, according to Roman Lapinski, real property agent with the Department of Real Estate Management.

When ACTION LINE contacted that department in mid-March, Donald Anderson, senior real property agent, said his office heard in January for the first time that there was a potential buyer for the property and he had ordered it appraised by the county engineer's office at that time. He promised to urge that office to rush their appraisal since you had waited so long.

Unseated

Last July I purchased a '72 Plymouth Duster from Garden Grove Chrysler-Plymouth, 10080 Garden Grove Blvd., Garden Grove. The car wasn't equipped the way I wanted, it had a bench front seat, but a salesman urged me to take it anyway because I could always trade the parts with any new Duster they got in. I called a week later and was told the equipment still hadn't come in. The next week I was told the equipment had been in the week before but had been sold. I keep calling but I still can't get my bucket seats and console. Can you help? K.D., Bellflower.

No. Ken Jones, president of the dealership, told us you were notified when the equipment was in "but she never came in and so we sold it. We felt that morally we could sell the stuff since she didn't pay us one penny for it." He said since your purchase in July, this Duster with the bucket seats and console you wanted was the only one to come through his firm and now a trade can't be made because of the changes in seat designs and colors on the '73 models.

Insecure

Can you get me some information about an organization calling itself the American Security Council? My husband is interested in it, but as a disabled veteran, he can't afford to become associated with an outfit that may be subversive or a Communist front. Mrs. R.G.M., Long Beach.

The American Security Council, with headquarters at 203 N. Main St. in Culpeper, Va., is an anti-Communist, non-profit group working to alert Americans to what it views as threats to national security. The council feels the admission of Communist China to the United Nations and the Communist control of Cuba are two such threats. It supports a strong military force and fears the United States is becoming a second-rate power. It approved of the intensive B-52 raids on the Hanoi-Haiphong areas of North Vietnam last December and opposes any amnesty for men who fled the country to avoid the draft. ### Water skier may be hired as witness

From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors Friday were urged to hire an expert witness at a cost of $450 to help the county defend a $300,000 lawsuit brought by a water skier who crashed into submerged rocks near the mouth of the Los Angeles River in Long Beach in 1970.

Officials said the suit filed by Richard David Artz against the City of Long Beach and the county's Flood Control District is scheduled to come to trial Monday.

They said Artz is claiming general damages plus medical costs, loss of earnings and any further relief that the court may direct as a result of the accident in which he suffered severe facial injuries.

Relating to Ampex stock

Watson kin warns Ward on slurs

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

Attorney Frank Belcher, father-in-law of County Assessor Philip Watson, has told Supervisor Baxter Ward he will not "tolerate any further reflections of improper conduct" relating to Belcher's purchase of stock in the Ampex Corp.

Belcher said in a letter Ward has made repeated references to "a relative of an elected county official" as having bought stock in Ampex, the firm which was to have supplied the equipment for the controversial ORACLE program now the subject of a lawsuit.

Belcher's letter which told Ward to "cease making my private affairs a matter of your concern" was released to the press Friday by Watson who also lashed the supervisor for "carelessly implying wrongdoing after a faulty and inadequate investigation."

Watson also disclosed that Ampex had submitted a proposal to the assessor's office to develop an automated records system similar to the ORACLE program which was designed to automate criminal records in the sheriff's department.

He said he rejected the proposal as being too costly but admitted three of his staff members had made flights to Ampex installations or conventions in Las Vegas and San Francisco.

Watson said he thought the trips were made at county expense but said if they were at Ampex's expense he "wouldn't criticize it because it is common practice and not a bit unusual."

Friday's events followed a series of charges and calls for public hearings made by Ward ever since the county cancelled its $3.1 million ORACLE contract with Ampex a few weeks ago and filed suit against the firm for recovery of $4.2 million damages. Ampex in turn has filed a counter suit claiming $22.5 million from the county.

Following cancellation of the contract Ward disclosed he had investigated rumors some 40 county employees or their relatives had bought Ampex stock.

HE SAID only one name on the list showed up as having sold Ampex stock in February adding that he would not release the name because he felt there was no wrongdoing involved in the stock transaction.

However he gain called for a public hearing after saying two individuals in the sheriff's department flew to Las Vegas and Mexico City at Ampex expense. But he withdrew his call for the public hearing after acting County Counsel John Larson said any further public discussion might prejudice the case and make Ampex lawyers move for a change of venue because of the pretrial publicity.

Meanwhile it was reported that Belcher bought 1,000 Ampex shares about four or five years ago when the stocks were at a high figure. He then apparently bought another 1,000 shares in February when the stocks had dipped considerably and 30 days later sold the original shares to declare a $30,000 loss for income tax purposes.

Watson pointed out in ing to investigating Officers Tom Butcher and Ed Wysocki.

The little girl, they added, also had been injured before hiding from the man who assaulted her mother. In fear, she remained in the cottage until late in the day when a concerned neighbor woman came to see if there was trouble at the home, the officers said.

Investigators reported that the little girl was in shock when they arrived at the home, suffering from a bruised neck and a scalp laceration.

The child told them, "Tall man did it," the officers reported, and she told them the man came to the door during the night and began beating both of them as she tried to keep him away from her mother before fleeing.

The officers later said they were seeking a white man, about 25 years old, with long brown hair, in connection with the killing.

The child, police added, was admitted to St. Mary's Hospital for treatment of her injuries.

Neighbors said the woman was a regular worshipper with other members of a Long Beach Buddhist group, Nichiren Shoshu, which meets at 1638 Linden Ave., police said.

The officers added that leaders of the group have asked to be given custody of the woman's body so it may be returned to Japan for burial.

"Mama die," the little Japanese-American girl told neighbors when she answered their knock at the door Friday—and then she showed them her mother's bludgeoned body with which she spent the night in their Long Beach cottage.

Police, called to the scene about 2 p.m. by neighbors, said they found the body of Michiko Zermeno, 41, sprawled on the living room floor of the cottage, at 321 Maine Ave.

The woman apparently was beaten to death with a heavy glass ash tray late Thursday night or early Friday in the presence of her 5-year-old daughter Allison, according

Philanthropist just wanted to 'shake-up' Caltech students

United Press International

California oil tycoon Ross McCollum, who was annoyed by an "impeach Nixon" banner atop a dormitory, Friday said he only meant to "shake-up" the Caltech campus when he threatened to cancel a planned $1 million gift.

McCollum, a long-time Caltech trustee, said the only other time students moved him to extreme action was when he wrote UC Berkeley out of his will after campus riots there a decade ago.

But Friday, a week after the Caltech students' banner was hoisted—and later torched by other students—millionaire McCollum said he had cooled down enough to withdraw his threat.

The 70-year-old president of the National Oil Co. said he was sitting down to his morning coffee a week ago when he saw a picture in a Pasadena newspaper of the "impeach Nixon" banner.

"That picture is going to cost them $1 million," said the oilman at the time. He had planned to give the money to Pasadena's famed engineering school.

McCollum wrote a letter to the school, saying, "I would be just a damn fool to contribute my money to the kind of institution that can't control its students. There are other places I can put my money."

McCollum said Friday he wasn't sorry for his angry, spontaneous reaction but in thinking it over, he wouldn't withdraw his million-dollar philanthropy. He has already spent a small fortune for a campus planetary science lab.

"Caltech's a good outfit, the best, really," said McCollum, "and I never really considered not giving them a dime. But the students who pulled this kind of monkey business just dragged the school's name down into the gutter."

Cigarette sets fire, smoker badly burned

A 21-year-old Hawthorne man, who apparently fell asleep on a sofa with a lighted cigarette in his hand, was reported in critical condition at County USC Medical Center late Friday with second-degree burns over 44 per cent of his body.

Fire investigators said Donald Berry, of 13518 S. Yukon Ave., was visiting 19-year-old Raymond De La Cruz, 5022 W. 129th St., Hawthorne, when the accident occurred about 2:15 a.m.

Firemen said De La Cruz attempted to put out the fire on Berry's clothing with a garden hose before the engine companies arrived.

De La Cruz was not injured, firemen said. They estimated damage to the house at $7,000.

Shooting suspect's no-show irks judge

Herman Lee Clouston, accused of shooting to death a Buena Park police officer, was not delivered to Santa Ana Superior Court Friday, nor were psychiatric reports of his ability to defend himself.

Judge James K. Turner, obviously irked over the failure of Atascadero State Hospital authorities to produce Clouston, reset a hearing for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Clouston, now 38, is accused of the Sept. 21 shooting of Buena Park Detective Darrel (Bud) Cate, 44, who had called at the Clouston apartment in Anaheim to arrest him on a sex-perversion warrant.

M'Closkey urges query of Nixon

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Congress must question President Nixon in person about the Watergate scandal if the Justice Department does not, Rep. Paul McCloskey said Friday.

The maverick Republican said there are "potential areas of criminal conduct on the part of the President" and Nixon should be "treated like any other citizen."

"The President has said he has nothing to hide," McCloskey told a news conference. "If the Justice Department doesn't question him, the House of Representatives must." He noted the House is "constitutionally the only body that can impeach a President."

HE said it was significant that attorney general nominee Elliot Richardson revealed Wednesday that the White House would not invoke executive privilege and refuse to answer to a special Justice Department prosecutor.

"We could very possibly be faced with the situation under which the President himself may be guilty of obstructing justice or failing to report it when it comes to his attention, which is a felony," McCloskey said.

He emphasized nothing had been proven, but said the Justice Department so far has failed to ask "the tough question, which is 'Did the President know about it or not?'"

Nixon's "Achilles Heel" has always been dirty campaign tactics and the reliance on large, secret campaign contributions from big contributors," said McCloskey, who challenged Nixon for the GOP presidential nomination last year.

REP. PAUL McCLOSKEY Registers With GOP

HE said Nixon should be "put under oath like any other witness" and "treated like any other citizen" because the allegations involve criminal affairs related to the campaign and not to White House business.

McCloskey called the news conference to announce he is reregistering as a Republican, although he had attempted to register as declining to state his party last March.

"I'd hate to leave now when the Republican Party is going down for the count," he said there is "no greater challenge now than to restore faith in the Republican Party."

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

WASHINGTON — The White House is slipping and Congress is rising as the balance of power in Washington is being altered perceptibly by the Watergate conspiracy case.

For the first time in six years, the House of Representatives went on record Thursday, by a vote of 219 to 188, in opposition to President Nixon's policies in Indochina.

For the second time in five weeks, the Senate declared Thursday, 66 to 24, that the White House was obligated to adhere to the directions of Congress on government spending.

"Both houses are beginning to see eye to eye on congressional responsibility," the Senate Democratic leader, Mike Mansfield, said Friday in an interview.

A senior associate of President Nixon predicted privately Friday that the White House and the Nixon Cabinet would abandon their attitude of disregard for those on Capitol Hill and become, in the official's words,

"more receptive" to congressional viewpoints.

The change is only beginning to be visible. Much of it is atmospheric. It remains for Congress, long a slumbering giant, to take steps to "even the balance," as Mansfield put it, but he and others are becoming increasingly persuaded that the legislative branch is "waking up to the realities of life."

One index of the change is the relative silence of the White House. Nixon held a reception a month ago to honor House and Senate members who voted to sustain two vetoes of spending measures and the President was said, after the first veto victory, to be "doing nips-ups" Thursday, hours after the House had rejected the administration rationale for the Cambodian bombing, the President's spokesmen said that they had no comment.

In a clear warning to the White House, Mansfield said that the Senate would follow up the House vote on Cambodia, probably next week, and that it would move swiftly to consider an outright ban on American involvement in Cambodia.

Before the House vote, the administration had said that the refusal to allow transfer of $430 million of defense funds would not, by itself, halt the bombing.

But Mansfield, who is normally among the most taciturn of political leaders, said, "If the will of the Congress and the intention of the Congress — the representatives of the people — are not adhered to, then we will face a true constitutional crisis. One thing this country cannot afford at this time is a constitutional crisis."

The Senate Democratic leader said that "there's been a change" in the relationship between Congress and the White House. Asked if the Watergate case had been responsible, he smiled; sucked on his pipe and attributed the change to "circumstances."

Others in Congress are less reluctant to state the situation more badly. Sen. J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, the Democratic chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee told a television interviewer Thursday night that "Watergate is the bursting of the boil" of presidential power.

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, the chairman of the House Republican Conference, said in a telephone interview Friday that Watergate had, if anything, made it more difficult for him to vote against the White House on the bombing issue.

Anderson said that other Republicans had asked him if he was willing to "kick the President when he's down," but that he had replied, "this is not a question of loyalty to the President. It's a question of loyalty to the Constitution."

A veteran House Democrat not normally given to hyperbole, Henry S. Reuss of Wisconsin, said on television that both President Nixon and Vice President Agnew should resign "for the good of the country." He said that European statesmen he had spoken to at a meeting in France "cannot understand how America can limp along with a fractured presidency for the next 44 months."

The antiwar Republican who ran unsuccessfully against Nixon in the party's presidential primaries last year, Paul N. McCloskey of California, said that the House should begin an impeachment inquiry if the President does not submit to questioning under oath about Watergate.

While the Reuss and McCloskey reactions were somewhat unrepresentative in tone, it seemed clear that attitudes toward Watergate were permeating nearly everything that Congress was doing.

Some House Republican leaders reportedly implored party members, at a caucus on Wednesday, to line up behind the White House opposition to the Cambodian amendment so that the vote "won't be taken as lack of confidence in the President over Watergate."

But the issue was cast almost that way by Rep. John J. Rhodes of Arizona, the chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee. In the floor debate over the bombing issue, he pleaded for "a six-weeks vote of confidence" in the President's Indochina policy. But the House denied it.

One congressional observer saw in the bombing vote a victory for the Democratic majority in Congress. The antibombing majority contained 35 Republicans, 9 more than could be counted on in previous antiwar votes.

But, perhaps more significant, there were 184

Democrats against the White House policy Thursday — 44 more than had normally taken such a stand. They included all but two of the 28 first-term House Democrats and, for the first time, most of the old-line party leaders, including the speaker of the House, Carl Albert of Oklahoma.

Some of the southern Democrats who had steadfastly endorsed White House policies in Indochina rose to declare that they had had enough.

"I felt an obligation to stand beside American fighting men committed in combat," said one of them, Rep. John R. Rarick of Louisiana. "There are no longer any American men in Cambodia. And I for one, shall not vote for any blank check legislation that would risk the possibility of U.S. men being used in a military build-up for a political chess match."

Much more frequent among opponents of the bombing, including Democrats and Republicans who had been Vietnam war hawks, was a declared desire to reassert Congressional authority over the making of wars.

"This is the one chance, an excellent chance, for Congress to assert itself," said Rep. William J. Randall, a Missouri Democrat. "If we do not do it now, we had just as well disband."

President of client firm linked to Watergate Connally on leave of absence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House adviser John B. Connally took a leave of absence from his Texas law firm Friday after it was disclosed the firm represents a Houston company whose president is being questioned by a grand jury about a $100,000 campaign contribution linked to the Watergate bugging.

Both the White House and Connally's firm denied there was any conflict of interest, and the law firm said it represented the company and not its president, Robert H. Allen.

A news report Friday said that the firm of Vinson, Elkins, Searis and Connally has been representing Gulf Resources and Chemical Co.

Allen appeared Friday before a federal grand jury in Houston investigating the $100,000 contribution to President Nixon's campaign fund, which was routed through Mexico to the bank account of a convicted Watergate conspirator.

Allen was the Nixon finance chairman in Texas last year.

Connally, who served as Nixon's treasury secretary for 18 months, last week announced his switch from the Democratic to the Republican Party. He joined the White House staff Thursday as a part-time, unpaid adviser to Nixon.

The report said that after federal investigator traced the $100,000 contribution through the Mexican "money laundering" process and back to Gulf Resources' Texas bank account to a bank account of the corporation's Mexican subsidiary, Compania de Azufro Veracruz.

The Mexican subsidiary turned over the money to its attorney, Manuel Ogarrro or his representative then converted $89,000 of the money into four cashier's checks, which eventually wound up in the Miami bank account of convicted Watergate conspirator Bernard Barker.

The remaining $11,000 was converted into cash. Then the $89,000 in checks and $11,000 in cash were sent back to Texas, where it was turned over to an oil company vice president, Roy Winchester of Pennzoil United Inc., the newspaper said.

"The funds were then combined with an additional $600,000 in contributions and placed inside a suitcase. Winchester then rushed the $700,000 in the suitcase by plane to Washington, where the funds were given to the Nixon re-election committee," Newsday said, just before the April 7 deadline of the new campaign fund disclosure law that would have required identification of the contributors.

In January, the entire $100,000 contribution was returned at Allen's request.

Mitchell leaves old Nixon law firm

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, under indictment on charges of perjury and obstructing a federal investigation, Friday withdrew his name from his Wall Street law firm and took a leave of absence to devote his time to "personal affairs."

Mitchell had been a partner with the firm of Mudge Rose Guthrie Alexander and Mitchell since 1966, when he merged his law business with President Nixon's old law firm.

The terse, one-sentence statement issued by his secretary said, "John N. Mitchell stated that he had taken a leave of absence from Mudge Rose Guthrie Alexander and Mitchell in order to devote his time and attention to his personal affairs, and that at his request, his name had been withdrawn from the firm name."

Mitchell was not available for comment. Neither his office nor the firm itself would explain why he had removed his name from the firm.

Ex-Martha guard due to lose job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stephen B. King, the former bodyguard for Martha Mitchell, who accused him of manhandling her, is expected to be quietly dropped from the Agriculture Department, where he was hired at the insistence of White House aides last December.

An informed department source said Friday that King's job as a personnel assistant to Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz would be phased out. King said in a brief interview he had no current plan to resign and was not aware of any plans to eliminate his position.

KING'S departure would follow that of another former employee of President Nixon's re-election campaign committee. Last week, Robert C. Odle, who had been the committee's director for administration, was fired by Butz after less than a week on the department's payroll as a temporary consultant.

"The King operation here will be quietly dismantled over the next couple of weeks, and he will vanish," the source said.

GOP governors decide to speak

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK — The Republican governors spent most of Friday at Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's country estate before emerging with a six-sentence statement deploring the Watergate scandal with declaring, "We believe the President."

Less than 48 hours after they had decided to say nothing collectively about Watergate, the GOP governors apparently decided they had to say something about the scandal shaking President Nixon's administration before their semiannual meeting here.

"We deplore Watergate," the unanimously adopted statement declared. "We support the President. We believe the President."

It also expressed "confidence in the future of our country," said President Nixon "has achieved major accomplishments for our country," and added, "we will do whatever we can to help meet the vital needs of our country."

Segretti aide guilty in phony Muskies letter

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Accountant George Hearing pleaded guilty Friday to charges of distributing during the Florida presidential campaign a phony letter charging two presidential candidates with sexual misconduct.

Hearing and alleged political saboteur Donald Segretti, 28, a Los Angeles attorney and Nixon campaign figure, were accused in a two-count federal indictment handed down last Friday in Orlando of publishing and distributing a letter printed on the campaign letterhead of U.S. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and with conspiracy to distribute it.

The bogus letter accused two of Muskies Democratic rivals, Sens. Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, of sexual misconduct.

Gov. Linwood Holton of Virginia, the chairman of the Republican Governors' Association, told reporters that the statement emerged as the governors sat around a dining room table at Rockefeller's Pocantico Hills estate in Westchester County north of the city.

AT THE closed session, Rockefeller reportedly told his fellow governors he thinks that the severity of the criticism directed at Nixon for his handling of the Watergate case might produce a backlash of sympathy for the President.

Asked at the news conference whether he had said there might be a backlash that would help Republicans next year he replied: "I did not make such a statement."

The governors also named a three-member committee headed by Gov. Stanley K. Hathaway of Wyoming to recommend to next month's National Governors' conference specific steps states can take "to cut consumption and waste of fuel and to develop and expand domestic energy sources."

Asked why the governors were more specific about the energy crisis than about Watergate, Holton said it was because "that is something we can still influence in the future."

Much of the press conference dealt with efforts by reporters to draw out Rockefeller on the published report quoting his associates as saying he has made "an emotional commitment" to a 1976 presidential bid.

The four-term governor smilingly parried most of the questions, replying to one about 1976 by citing his announcement of preliminary 1974 planning and adding he planned to take "one step at a time."

Earlier, several of the governors said in discussing the decision against a Watergate statement that anything on which all the governors could agree would be "a nothing statement" or so bland as to be meaningless.

Nixon aides deny trade bill has harmful impact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three cabinet members testified Friday that American businessmen, workers and farmers have nothing to fear from the sharp increase in imports that could follow enactment of the administration's trade bill.

Businesses and unions vulnerable to competition from low-priced imported goods fear that President Nixon's trade representatives may use authority in the bill to negotiate a new worldwide reduction in trade barriers that will hurt them.

But at a House Ways and Means Committee hearing, Secretaries Butz of Agriculture sought to allay such fears.

Each brought the same message, that low wages overseas do not offset the productivity of American farms and factories. They said the nation has much to gain from relaxation of import quotas and high tariffs.

Moreover, they said, Nixon's bill has safeguards to cushion the impact of increased foreign competition, such as easier access to job retraining and relocation funds for displaced workers.

"Our workers do not need insulations from foreign competition," Brennan said. "What they need is a chance to compete on equal grounds."

Endorsing the bill without change, Brennan broke again with the AFL-CIO over major legislation. A former New York City construction union leader, Brennan also has bucked the labor federation by backing Nixon's minimum wage bill over AFL-CIO proposals.

Dent said the trade bill would help U.S. negotiators win improved American access to foreign markets.

Butz said its enactment could lead to an increase in American agricultural exports even greater than the 5 per cent annual growth rate now predicted. Farm exports already account for one-fifth of all U.S. agricultural income and for more than 80 million production acres.

Butz said the notion that greater farm exports would drive up domestic food prices is "a fallacy of major proportion."

He said the Russian wheat sale had forced the price of wheat in a loaf of bread higher by only half a cent, but that and other grain and soybean deals had created 100,000 non-farm jobs.

Nixon proposes legal aid for poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon asked Congress Friday to provide America's poor with free legal assistance "independent of political pressures."

It was a new version of a 1971 bill which Congress had liberalized and which the President vetoed last year partly because he considered it too expensive.

But the previous objections, principally against limiting and gagging the activities of poverty lawyers, are expected to crop up again.

In proposing creation of a Legal Services Corporation, Nixon insisted the need still existed for high-quality legal assistance in civil actions "to those who would otherwise be unable to afford it."

"Legal assistance for the poor, when properly provided, is one of the most constructive ways to help them to help themselves," the President said in his message to Congress.

"Justice is served far better and differences are settled more rationally within the system than on the street. Now is the time to make legal services an integral part of our judicial system."

The President's bill would replace the legal aid program involving some 2,250 lawyers in 900 neighborhood offices around the country. This experimental project began eight years ago and is now operating out of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The President's proposal also would:

— Deny a lawyer to anyone whose poverty resulted "from a refusal to seek or accept a job."

— Bar attorneys engaged in legal assistance "from participating in political activities" strikes, boycotts, picketing and other various forms of civil disturbance."

— Prevent attorneys employed full-time in legal assistance from engaging in any outside practice of law.

— Deny use of corporation funds, directly or indirectly, to influence passage or defeat of any federal, state or local laws.

— Deny free legal aid to persons under 18 without the written consent of at least one parent or guardian or one appointed by a court.

— Allow governors to appoint a state advisory council, to review the spending of legal assistance funds, with the power to notify the corporation of apparent misuse of such monies.

— Limit free legal assistance to persons whose income is less than double the federal poverty standard. This would mean a family of four earning a total of $8,200 or less.

The nonprofit corporation proposed by Nixon would have 11 members named by the President.

A majority of them would be lawyers, with no more than six from one political party.

This study is to be ready no later than June 30, 1974.

"America's system of law now requires equal treatment for all in our courts of criminal justice," Nixon said.

"It is no less important that equal access be afforded those who seek redress through our civil laws."

Pressure on safety unit alleged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The five members of the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) will be questioned under oath May 21 about charges they were pressured by an administration official to stop criticizing government safety policies, a Commerce Committee spokesman said Friday.

The committee chairman, Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said earlier this week he was told that NTSB Chairman John Reed was directed by an administration official "to cease issuing such reports which might in any way be construed as critical of the Transportation Department and its Federal Aviation Administration (FAA)."

The administration official was not identified, but congressional sources said it was an assistant transportation secretary, William S. Heffelfinger. Heffelfinger denied the charge.

The sources said Reed was told to rewrite the board's annual report to Congress and omit its claim to independent status, which is stipulated under law.

A Commerce Committee spokesman said a board member, Adm. Louis Thayer, reported he was telephoned by Reed, a former Republican governor of Maine, at home and told that the administration wanted the critical reports stopped.

Thayer, it was related, said Reed told him "he should know how the administration felt "in view of the fact that I (Thayer) was coming up for consideration for reappointment before long."

Two other members of the board, Francis McDams and William Haley, also said they were advised of the administration position.

A spokesman for the board said, however, that the group had never "toned down any of its recommendations."

End to controls urged by business economists

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — A panel of economists said Friday that President Nixon should get rid of wage-price controls as soon as possible.

But the economists, who advise the Business Council, an organization of about 100 of America's top corporate leaders, said the White House may not be able to abandon controls now for political reasons.

"There was strong agreement that the small amount of help in temporarily controlling inflation, provided by price controls, is more than offset by the harm they do in disrupting the economic system," the economists said in a report to the council, which gathered for its semi-annual meeting here.

Howard Morgens, an economist who made the report, told newsmen later that businessmen welcomed Phase 3 as "an orderly step toward elimination of controls." Morgens added that it was the consensus of his panel that controls should be abandoned "just as rapidly as feasible."

The business economists predicted that the rate of inflation will be between 4.5 and 5 per cent this year, but should taper off next year to about 3.5 per cent. They said that the best way to control inflation is through keeping the reins on federal spending and the nation's money supply.

Otherwise, the economists said the economy should grow between 10.5 to 11 per cent this year, with about 6.5 to 7 per cent of that coming in real or noninflationary growth. But in 1974, the rate of real growth should slow down to about 3.5 per cent, they said.

Price controls also are having an adverse effect on the oil industry, said Rawleigh Warner Jr., chairman of Mobil Oil Corp. He said the Cost of Living Council's special controls in the oil industry "are becoming counterproductive" with a worldwide shortage of oil and a high demand for it.

At a panel discussion on energy policy, Warner also said he thought it would be counterproductive if the nations that rely on oil from the Middle East should band together "and confront the producing countries with a monolithic bloc."

This kind of confrontation, by pitting the consuming nations against the producing nations, "would inevitably inject politics into the issue of energy, which should remain essentially a commercial issue," Warner said.

Richard C. Gerstenberg, chairman of General Motors Corp., said that the price of gasoline at the pump will continue to climb in the face of shortages, but he declined to predict how far.

Shermer L. Silbley, chairman of Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of San Francisco, called for full-scale development of nuclear power generators to help meet the demand for electrical energy. He conceded that development is slow in coming.

Gerstenberg told reporters after another panel discussion on transportation policy that the shutting down of the Penn Central Railroad could be "nothing short of an economic catastrophe" if permitted to happen. He said businesses throughout the Northeast depend heavily on the railroad

Colorado desalting bill urged

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Legislation to authorize $135 million of desalting projects for the upper Colorado River basin has been introduced by 14 California members and eight members of the House from other western states.

"The salinity of the waters of the Colorado has been increasing in recent years and, unless substantial control measures are taken, damages of millions of dollars each year will accrue to water users," said Reps. Harold T. Johnson, D-Calif., and Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., two senior members of the House Interior Committee.

The desalting plans are needed because of the increasing deterioration of Colorado River Water, which supplies the Los Angeles metropolitan area. In addition, Mexico has protested the increasing salt content of the river when it crosses the border.

The projects would be financed with 75 per cent federal funds and 25 per cent funds from power deliveries along the Colorado.

GARDENING

By Joe Littlefield

Bare-root roses planting season is long gone, but that needn't deter gardeners from visiting nurseries and picking out container roses that too were bare root last December through early March.

Some gardeners prefer to select container grown roses because the plants have past the "early growing pains," that is when newly planted roses have to be kept constantly moist until they sprout. Also avoid cutting back branch ends to the topmost active buds when they have died normally.

Actually new container roses are almost like a bouquet if selected when blooming. The gardener too has the opportunity of picking out exactly the favorite color tones he or she wants.

CARE must be taken not to loosen the root ball soil when plants are set out. Here's a helpful suggestion for planting a container rose into the ground. The hole should be at least six inches wider and deeper than the size of the root ball. A dry plant hole should be filled with water, then plant set out when water has disappeared.

Look for a faint horizontal scar-like scratch, and cut off that wilted branch above the third leaf below the scratch.

THERE'S no insecticide spray that can kill it within the branch. It might be possible that if the gardener had recently used a systemic insecticide spray and the flying insect had laid the egg, that it might kill it thusly. But the safest way is to cut off the wilted branch.

Don't let the hybrid tea rose's lush, sucker-like canes that grow from the bud union area grow to its maximum height, because when it finally blooms it has short, dinky stems with flowers. All the wonderful growth isn't actually wasted when such blooms appear, but had the gardener let those canes grow to only two feet and then snapped off the tips (an inch or so), they'd have new secondary branches which would develop lovely long-stemmed blossoms that would be wonderful for a showy bouquet of roses indoors.

GARDENER will not only have better, richer color, longer lasting rose blossoms when he feeds the roses once a month (with rose food) but lawns will grow lush and greener if they are fed with a turf fertilizer at least a minimum of every three months. Some feed their lawns every two months but with lighter amounts.

HELP — This is an appeal to you readers. Mrs. G. S. Adkins loaned her column of mine which I had on clivia, and that person lost it. I've looked back through to October, 1972 and didn't find anything on clivia of my back copies. Please, if one of you readers remember which month and issue had the clivia write up, please let Mrs. Adkins know about it. Her address is 5432 Montclair, La Palma, 90623. She'll try to get a back copy of it, if you notify her, or make a Xerox of it and mail it to her.

Q. — Can I splice an avocado tree? I have a young tree grown from a seed but they tell me it will not bear fruit without splicing. I heard you speak at our Lakewood Women's Club and I'm convinced you are very knowledgeable. I do hope you can help me. — Mrs. Kathryn Downes, 4734 Coldbrook Ave., Lakewood.

A. — THEY who told you are nearly right, Kathryn! You are taking a chance and maybe wasting four or five years to find out that when it bears fruit, it may not have much meat over the seed. You'd be wiser to buy a good budded healthy avocado tree and forget about splicing the young one. If you still wish to splice it, which isn't the right term, (grafting) then you'd be wiser to have it done by a knowledgeable nurseryman or by a professional gardener.

Q. — We live on a second-floor apartment on Ocean Boulevard. I have five redwood tubs, 12 inches inside top diameter and one 16 inches, all facing west and have tried to grow various plants like geraniums, annuals and others. Some plants froze last winter. Please, will you suggest something for me to try? Hopefully something that will last and not have to be replaced often. — Mrs. George Garnier, 1130 E. 1st St.

A. — Let's expound first on the best way to grow container plants. Size of plants and their root balls determine the size of the container to be used. Soil is also an important factor pertaining to watering. There's also a correct way to water. Container should not be sitting on the floor or a saucer unless they are on bricks or inch-size redwood stakes cut only long enough to accommodate the container tub's bottom. Your problem might have been keeping the upper soil which would build up a possible alkaline problem from the water. The soil you used might have been common soil scratched up around the apartment and packed hard, or you may have set the plants in all peat moss, or all leaf mold, or all planter mix material. The plants also might have been exposed to the cold west wind off the ocean. Write me again and give me more details so I'll be able to give you more help. — Joe Littlefield

ROSES . . . a beautiful bouquet

There's a new fertilizer on the market that contains equal amounts of sulphur and iron sulphate that helps green up lawns better, yet also contains equal amounts of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash plus two trace minerals. It is also used for chlorotic plants.

Garden jobs

Cut back old runner branches of pansies and violas, but not more than one third their total length. If cut off completely, it may shock the plants and they'll die. Any pansies or violas that are limp or sickly should be pulled up and discarded. Most likely the crown areas were buried hence the limpness or spindly look.

Nierembergia with phlox-like rich purple blossoms and feathery foliage growth, fertilized and they'll bloom again.

Scatter snail-slug bait periodically to decimate those pests and lessen possible population explosion later. Be sure to scatter the bait generously in ground cover areas as well as at the edge of those plantings.

May is the last tip-pinning month for fuchsias. Continue feeding them at monthly intervals.

Karabian irked by lax medical care at Folsom

SACRAMENTO (U) — A legislator who investigated medical care at Folsom State Prison last year said Friday he was "shocked and angered" that a recent state report revealed "no action" on his earlier findings and recommendations.

A state health team's report — made public this week — stated that fire drills were not being held at the prison hospital, no registered nurses were on night or Sunday shifts, and that doctors' records on patients' progress were very poor.

Democratic Assemblyman Walter Karabian of Monterey Park, who chaired an Assembly investigating committee on prison reform last year, said the critical findings of the Department of Public Health about the 2,000-inmate facility near Sacramento "in large part are a repetition of the same conditions cited in the report of my committee."

"I am greatly distressed to learn that the Folsom Prison administration has taken no action to correct problems which we found to exist more than one year ago," Karabian added.

IN THE earlier report, the committee called Folsom "the most dismal of all those institutions visited."

When Karabian's committee issued its findings last November, Phil Guthrie, a state prison spokesman, said state prisons "provide a level of patient care equal to or better than most community hospitals around the state."

Friday, Guthrie said he still stuck by his earlier statement and added that none of the state health team's criticisms "speak to the day-to-day level of care in the Folsom hospital."

"You know, you can provide expert medical care with holes in the linoleum and without emergency generators" — two deficiencies the report mentioned.

GUTHRIE also said that the Department of Corrections thought that the medical technicians who work Sunday and night shifts instead of registered nurses provided "satisfactory" care for inmate patients. He said many of these technicians were "veterans of the same kind of work" in the military.

Asked about flaws in the hospital's structure, Guthrie said his department has asked for $40,000 in the yet-to-be-approved 1973-74 budget to make needed improvements in the hospital next year.

But he said it would take about $100,000 to do a complete job of repairs and what was really needed was complete replacement of the hospital — which would take over $1 million.

HE ALSO said that if fire drills aren't being held, they will be now. He said that medical records do need to be improved at the hospital and that "we're working on that."

A Karabian spokesman said he has been told that Democrats plan to put appropriation recommended by the Karabian committee into the 1973-74 budget before it goes to the floor of either house.

Those funds would be for the entire state prison medical system and include $228,000 for medical equipment, $150,000 for higher doctors' salaries and $415,000 for additional psychiatric staff and salary increases for psychiatrists.

Penologist asks larger prisons

SACRAMENTO (U) — Plans for two new 400-inmate prisons to replace San Quentin have been scrapped in favor of even larger facilities because more Californians are winding up behind bars, according to state prison chief Ray Procunier.

Procunier said aging, fortresslike San Quentin is still slated for the junkpile eventually, but it might be replaced with a more modern prison on the same San Francisco Bay area site in addition to possible new prisons in other locations.

"What it's going to take I don't know — but we should have some idea in a very short time," Procunier said.

ONE alternative to the two 400-inmate maximum security prisons would be a central facility with "satellite" prisons of a few hundred inmates each nearby, Procunier said in an interview.

That would mean kitchens and power facilities could be centralized at a cost savings, he said. The concept could be compared roughly to the "cluster colleges" concept the University of California has followed at its Santa Cruz campus, Procunier added.

Operating costs of single 400-bed institutions also appear to be prohibitively high, Procunier said.

The State Department of Corrections decision against the two replacement prisons was revealed when Procunier asked the Senate Finance Committee to delete language in the proposed state budget limiting a $1.1 million appropriation to working drawings for the two prisons.

PROCUNIER asked for and got an appropriation of $300,000 for preliminary drawings of "correctional facilities."

But it's back to 'nuts and bolts' Riles discounts pupils' poor test results

SACRAEENTO (UPI) — Test results showing a sub-par classroom performance by California children were discounted Friday by state schools chief Wilson Riles, who boasted the nation's largest instruction system was still the best.

Nevertheless, the four-year downward trend in performance prompted Riles, superintendent of public instruction, to predict a more nuts-and-bolts teaching approach to reading and math, two areas where the tests showed dramatic weaknesses. In short, he said, students can look forward to more classroom drills in basic subjects to "balance" the so-called modern teaching methods.

Riles insisted that the

WILSON RILES
'Still the Best'

raw test results, disclosed Thursday at a meeting of the State Board of Education, did not fairly evaluate the skills and performance of the state's public school students.

The results indicated that sixth and 12th graders were below the test publisher's "norm" in intelligence and most skill areas. They also showed a slight but steady drop in scores from 1969, when the tests were first required, to last October. Generally, the biggest decreases were among the brightest pupils.

Riles said the nationwide exams, now six years old, are "out of date" and "are not testing what our youngsters are being taught."

His comments were echoed by State Board Chairman Newton L. Steward of Eureka, who declared, "our kids are not learning less, they are learning more."

In an interview, both men staunchly defended California as the nation's leader in public education, and said new tests would be devised next year to give a truer picture of how much students are learning and pinpoint the areas of weakness.

Riles said he based his statement that California was No. 1 in education "by talking to people who have moved in from other states and people who have left California."

Referring to the current exams, Riles said, "these tests tell us something but they don't tell us what to do about it. They don't identify where we can improve — in teachers, in books or what."

As a consequence of the consistently low math scores, a special task force was created this year to study the problem. The report, also submitted to the board Thursday, showed strong levels of understanding but poor ability in simple addition and subtraction skills.

Pointing to the task force study, Riles said part of the blame fell on colleges where "teachers are not getting proper training."

He said the children's test scores were being "pulled down" by instructors who have too much of an "academic" background and not enough in basic fundamentals.

He said the task force study would be sent to all school districts and predicted there would be "immediate" changes in classroom routine. Any textbook revisions would have to wait for 1976, Riles said.

On longrange, Riles hinted at a "swing back in the pendulum" from the modern teaching approaches popularized a decade ago to the traditional methods used prior to then. He said he would try to see that a "balance" was maintained between the two and declared the changes would affect books, teachers, teachers' training and instructional methods.

"We need teachers who understand English and also know how to teach it," Riles said.

Nixon geothermal energy policy blasted

PALM SPRINGS (U) — Unhappy geothermal energy proponents complained Friday that the Nixon administration is fiddling while the nation burns away its dwindling fuel resources.

Government officials and geothermal energy authorities from across the nation gathered here to discuss intergovernmental problems involved in the development of geothermal energy. But the chief question in their minds was why the federal government is delaying the opening up of federal land to geothermal development.

"Congress placed important geothermal energy development legislation on the books over two years ago, and the Department of Interior has not yet made federal lands available for lease or development, as the legislation provided," said Rep. Victory Veysey, R-Calif., one of the sponsors of the first National Conference on Geothermal Energy. He referred to the Geothermal Steam Resources Act of 1970.

The delay has officially been blamed on problems in the preparation of the regulations needed to implement the act.

A day before the conference the Interior Department said it was going to have to rewrite the environmental impact statement section of the regulations because of recent court decisions.

"These decisions are hitting us pretty hard," said Reid T. Stone, geothermal coordinator for the Interior Department. Stone said he hoped some leasing could begin within a few months.

Most of the nation's geothermal land is federally owned, and the private development companies said they can't afford to start development until federal land is released.

Phil Scott of Gulf Oil

Corp. said, "If we can't get the federal acreage, it will just be the end of Gulf's geothermal activity."

Some major development companies already have disbanded their geothermal sections because they say they can't afford to wait around indefinitely.

Utah, Idaho and other states which own geothermal land are delaying granting leases on state land until they see how the federal regulations read.

Consequently, geothermal development is bogged down by federal delay.

Many people aren't buying the Interior Department's explanation for the delay.

Norman B. Livermore, California Secretary for Resources, told the conference, the "delay is incomprehensible to me in view of the fact that it only took nine months to write environmental impact statements, hold public hearings, offer leases, and hold sales for federal oil and gas leases on properties offshore of the state of Louisiana, and yet geothermal leasing is completely stymied at the federal level."

Robert Rex, formerly director of the University of California at Riverside Geothermal Resources Program and now an executive of the Pacific Energy Corp., said, "This looks just like another piece of Watergate skulduggery. Where this act has been frozen is at the White House. The Interior Department has pursued it diligently."

Part of the problem seems to be that the Nixon Administration doesn't regard geothermal energy as a major source of power. In his recent energy message, President Nixon estimated geothermal energy would make up about one and a half per cent of the nation's total energy input by the year 2000.

Proponents of geothermal power say the figure could be as high as 20 per cent. They add that such power is not in the West alone but also exists in the gulf states in the form of geopressure geothermal energy which creates energy by pressure rather than steam.

At least 20 states have known geothermal areas, and Rex said, "The biggest geothermal potential in the country is probably the gulf coast."

Reagan orders initiative 'blitz'

SACRAMENTO (U) — Gov. Reagan launched a "blitz" campaign this weekend to qualify his controversial tax control initiative for a special statewide election he plans to call for Nov. 6.

The program includes a saturation schedule of one-minute Reagan radio commercials in Southern California and an effort to turn out up to 30,000 volunteer petition circulators throughout the state this weekend.

The volunteers will include appointed members of the governor's own staff working on their day off.

WITH less than three weeks to go, Reagan aides aren't sure how close they are to the 520,000 valid signatures needed to put the controversial measure on the ballot.

Gray said another petition "blitz" would be conducted next Saturday.

JAMES SCHLESINGER, CIA director and former CIA Deputy Director Gen. Robert Cushman, now Marine Corps commandant, right, meet with Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, before their closed door testimony Friday.

Cushman OK'd CIA aid on 'authority of President'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. Robert E. Cushman said Friday he was acting under orders backed by "the authority of the President's name" when he authorized CIA help to White House agents who burglarized the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The former deputy CIA director, in an affidavit, acknowledged that he ordered the CIA to furnish a wig, fake eyeglasses and other paraphernalia to Howard Hunt, a presidential consultant who was investigating security leaks and has since been convicted in the Watergate burglary.

Cushman, however, denied any wrongdoing on the CIA's part. He said he was not told what the equipment would be used for and felt certain "that the White House was being ordered to assist him (Hunt)."

He said John Ehrlichman, the resigned adviser to President Nixon, asked him to assist Hunt. Although Ehrlichman did not specifically invoke Nixon's name, Cushman said he realized "that he was one of the three chiefs of staff, as it were, to the President and that, therefore he spoke with the authority of the President's name."

Cushman, now the commandant of the Marine Corps, cut short a European trip and spent a full day on Capitol Hill explaining the case behind closed doors to three separate congressional committees.

Most members agreed afterward that the CIA itself had not violated the 1947 National Security Act, which bars the agency from any involvement in domestic surveillance or internal security.

"I don't think the CIA violated the law," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said. "I think the White House violated the law."

Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., chairman of a House Intelligence subcommittee, said after hearing Cushman "the problem here really isn't the agency going haywire. It was the order that was wrong."

Cushman said the CIA "comes under the authority of and works for the National Security Council which is, of course, the President himself."

He said Ehrlichman, who resigned April 30 as Nixon's chief domestic adviser, contacted him in 1971 and asked that the CIA give assistance to Hunt.

"I THEN drew the following conclusion, which I believe any reasonable man would have reached, namely, that Howard Hunt had been hired by the White House to act in the security field and that the Central Intelligence Agency was being ordered to assist him," Cushman said.

Hunt, a former CIA agent, was hired as a White House consultant to investigate security leaks, including the Pentagon Papers.

Cushman spent Friday behind closed doors at the capitol with CIA oversight subcommittees of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees and the Senate Appropriations Committee.

In an affidavit filed with the three panels, he said Ehrlichman contacted him about July 7, 1971, "and stated that Howard Hunt was a bona fide employee, a consultant on security matters, and that Hunt would come to see me and request assistance which Mr. Ehrlichman requested that I give."

ON JULY 22, Cushman said, Hunt came to his office and "stated that he had a very sensitive one-time interview that the White House wanted him to hold with a person whose ideology he was not too sure of and that he dare not reveal his, Hunt's, true identity."

"The White House, therefore, wanted assistance from our technical services in providing him with an identity which would be other than his own."

Hunt gave no further details, Cushman said, except to say "he was working to a good purpose in the interests of the country."

With that, Cushman said he authorized the CIA's technical services division to give Hunt false papers, a wig, fake eyeglasses and other paraphernalia so he could conduct the "interview" incognito.

Deadly pill circulating in the Southland

A barbiturate compound packing death or serious illness in an all-black capsule is being circulated in the Southland, sheriff's narcotics officers warned Friday.

Investigators said the compound, which includes a potentially lethal dose of the depressant Valium, has been found in the possession of several drug offenders arrested this week in the South Bay area.

The pill, packaged in a shiny, all-black capsule, contains almost 200 milligrams of diazepam, the active ingredient in Valium, a drug used in the treatment of anxiety, investigators said. The normal dosage for Valium is no more than 10 milligrams every four hours, officers added.

Sheriff's chemists warned that ingestion of the bootleg pill would definitely cause serious illness and could cause instant death in some persons.

Investigators said the drug first began appearing in Antelope Valley about a month ago.

ELLSBERG, RUSSO WIN CASE

Byrne, after hearing arguments from both sides, said he would rule speedily because "I have an obligation to protect the rights of the defendants and they have a right to a ruling on this motion."

Before Byrne retired to his chambers to consider his decision, he heard defense attorneys accuse the government of raising the last-minute wiretap issue to divert attention from the judge's investigation of Watergate and White House links to the case.

The government prosecutor also said that Ellsberg had no constitutional protection against having a psychiatrist's office broken into. Asst. U.S. Atty David Nissen said he knows of no federal law providing a physician-patient privilege of confidentiality in the case of a psychiatrist.

Byrne said he believed the government had made an "extraordinary series of disclosures" about official White House involvement in the investigation of a case and a man — Ellsberg — already in the process of litigation.

SINCE BYRNE began a probe of White House-Watergate involvement in the trial April 26, testimony and affidavits disclosed in court said Watergate conspirators G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt engineered a break-in at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist in September 1971. Hunt, a member of a special unit formed to investigate government news leaks, told the Watergate grand jury that the aim was to get at Ellsberg's psychiatric records.

The two-week investigation by Byrne spread to a second front Thursday when the FBI revealed Ellsberg was overheard on a wiretap up to two years before he released the Pentagon papers.

The hitherto secret wiretaps were at the home of Ellsberg's friend Morton Halperin, a one-time White House official.

Byrne expressed shock that the White House would form a special unit to investigate Ellsberg and the Pentagon papers. He said these actions had prejudiced the rights of both defendants.

HE SAID he believed that the Central Intelligence Agency, by aiding the conspirators in providing disguises for the break-in, "apparently acted beyond its statutory authority."

Byrne expressed dismay that government officials were aware "of the activities of this special unit" and that neither the court, nor the defendants, nor apparently the prosecution, was notified.

"These recent events compound a record already threaded with events that threatened the defendants' right to a fair and speedy trial," the judge said. He said that the government apparently had suppressed documents that could have helped prove the defendants' innocence.

Of the wiretaps, he said was most dismayed that the FBI reported its records on eavesdropping of Ellsberg had been lost. "There is no way the defendants nor the court nor the government itself can ever assess the effect that those wiretaps may have had," he said.

Although the government had offered to investigate further, the judge said it was too late.

It was the end of a trial that posed questions more far-reaching than the guilt or innocence of two men on charges of espionage.

THE judge said he would have submitted the trial issues to the jury: "The charges against these defendants raised serious issues. I certainly would prefer to have litigated this to completion."

Byrne said he had considered the possibility of a mistrial, although the defendants had not asked for one. "Under all conditions," the judge said, "the defendants should not have to risk the possibility that they might be tried again."

Byrne said that he felt has authority to dismiss the case is fully supported by case law rulings.

In arguments before the judge retired to consider his decision, prosecutor David Nissen said that even if the break-in of the psychiatrist's Beverly Hills office violated the confidential relationship between doctor and patient, codefendant Anthony Russo should not be covered by it.

He added that he felt the disclosure that wiretapping occurred and that the records of those taps have disappeared is not grounds for dismissal.

DEFENSE attorney Leonard Weinglass, representing Russo, said the government had raised the last minute wiretap revelation to divert the judge's attention from an investigation that might implicate the President himself.

The attorney noted that only a few days after the defense suggested subpoenaing President Nixon to testify about the Watergate and White House ties, the FBI announced that an agent had been found who remembered that Ellsberg was overheard on wiretaps in 1969 and 1970.

Weinglass said it seemed "strange" that such news should come after "the most profound Watergate disclosures in this case, after the disclosure that the President might be involved in this case."

Leonard Boudin, Ellsberg's chief defense attorney, seeking to get a legal decision on the issues that had been raised by the four-month-old trial, implored the judge not to rule until hearing arguments on another motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on grounds of insufficient evidence. Boudin sought to have the judge decide whether the government charges of espionage, conspiracy and theft against the two former government researchers had been just or not.

BUT the judge, refusing to hear the arguments, said that his rulings on the procedural matters that had engulfed the trial in controversy might make the argument moot.

The jurors had been sent home until Monday and had not been told of the developments which linked the trial to a political controversy in the nation's capital.

The 10 women and two men plus six alternates, who had sat through four months of testimony, had simply been told to shield themselves from publicity about the case despite the difficulty of avoiding headlines and news reports on the dramatic developments they were missing.

THE CASE was born of the Vietnam war, and, ironically, the war ended before the trial did. The issue Ellsberg said had spurred him to act — the desire for an end to the war — was outdated before testimony ever began.

Ellsberg faced the possibility of 115 years in prison; Russo could have drawn up to 25 years.

From the start, it was Ellsberg who held center stage. A handsome and intense onetime Marine and Pentagon war planner, Ellsberg was frequently described by those who had worked with him as "brilliant." His decision to release the top-secret Pentagon papers seemed based on a belief that the action of one man could bring an end to the war he had come to oppose.

The involvement of Russo, as both defendants described it, was almost accidental. He was Ellsberg's friend. He knew a woman who would let them use the copying machine at her advertising agency. Russo claimed he had not even read what it was that Ellsberg wanted to copy, but helped in the copying because he knew it must be important.

'Big fish' sought in Ellsberg break-in WASHINGTON (UPI) — California authorities are eyeing possible prosecution of former White House aides in connection with the effort to steal former Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatric records, it was learned Friday.

A team of Los Angeles County prosecutors, which has been in Washington since midweek working on the case, was reported concentrating on the "big fish" who ordered the burglary operation — not those who actually executed it.

"They are clearly looking up above, not down below," one source said.

Sworn documents filed in federal court have identified ex-presidential aides John D. Ehrlichman and Egil "Bud" Krogh as the men who directed a special White House investigation of Ellsberg resulting in the burglary. Ehrlichman has said the investigation was ordered by President Nixon but that neither he nor Nixon authorized any burglary.

RESIGNATIONS URGED

"The plain fact is that Mr. Nixon, whatever his involvement in the Watergate, has presided over a corrupt government," Reuss said. "The plain fact is that he has waited an unconscionably long time to do anything about it. A third plain fact is that he has forfeited public confidence."

"Since he has accepted full responsibility for his administration, Mr. Nixon should consider resigning for the good of the country. As a member of that administration, so should Mr. Agnew, though there is no suggestion of his implication in the Watergate."

Reuss, 61, a Harvard-trained lawyer and nine-term congressman, just returned from Strasbourg, France, where he was a member of a U.S. congressional delegation attending the European Parliament.

"Europeans cannot understand how America can limp along with a fractured presidency for the next 44 months," Reuss said. "Over there a crisis such as ours would be resolved by a legislative vote of no confidence, and the prompt creation of a new government."

Reuss said that Albert should appoint "leading Republicans" to roughly half the Cabinet positions; said that presidential appointees from ambassadors on down should be selected on the basis of merit and not patronage; and said "Republicans, in and out of Congress, would be asked to participate in policy-making at all stages."

In other Watergate developments:

—Dean was summoned before Sirica for a hearing Monday. Dean has petitioned that Sirica take custody of Watergate documents that Dean removed from his White House office.

—Convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr., who at the time was security chief at the Committee to Re-elect the President, said in a civil deposition that a 10-man team raided the Democratic National Headquarters at the Watergate complex last Memorial Day weekend — about two weeks before five men were caught with burglary and bugging equipment at the headquarters.

—Sirica granted immunity to Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio R. Martinez, two of the seven men who pleaded guilty or were convicted in the June 17 break-in at the Democratic offices. Barker and Martinez were taken to Capitol Hill to testify before Senate investigators.

—It was learned that the FBI and other federal agencies deliberately were excluded from the investigation that led to the indictments Thursday in New York of former Nixon Cabinet members John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans on charges of perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with a $200,000 Nixon re-election campaign contribution.

meet. North Vietnamese officials had said they had "no information" on a Kissinger-Tho meeting, even while White House officials had been insisting that there was an agreement.

Ziegler said that accompanying Kissinger will be Sullivan, Graham Martin, ambassador-designate to South Vietnam; William Stearman, a North Vietnamese specialist on the National Security Council, and Peter Rodman, Kissinger's aide.

Kissinger returned to Washington Thursday night after four days of talks in Moscow with Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party leader.

the future the funds are not available, then the Congress will have to assume the responsibility in that matter."

Ziegler reiterated that the purpose of the bombing, a daily occurrence for more than two months, was to pressure the antigovernment forces in Cambodia into accepting a cease-fire with the government.

There are imperfect cease-fire agreements for Vietnam and Laos, but none for Cambodia.

Administration officials have said that one of the chief objectives of Kissinger, in his talks with Tho, will be the securing of a commitment by North Vietnam to press her Cambodian allies into beginning cease-fire negotiations with Lon Nol's government.

Plans for the Kissinger-Tho meeting were first discussed last month by the White House as part of an announcement that preliminary talks would be held between their deputies — William Sullivan, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian affairs, and Nguyen Co Thach, deputy foreign minister.

Sullivan and Thach held three meetings in Paris on April 27, 29 and 30. But until Friday, Hanoi had not confirmed that Kissinger and Tho would

Citizen of Year TALB honors Harry Moore

Education Editor

Harry J. Moore, a founder of the California Interscholastic Federation and a former president of the Teachers Association of Long Beach, Friday night was named TALB's "citizen of the year."

Moore received a plaque commending his work in behalf of local education during TALB's annual awards banquet at Rochelle's Restaurant. The presentation was made by the association's president, Merle Glasgow.

Sen. George R. Moscone, D-San Francisco, made a brief appearance at the banquet to discuss pending legislation that would legalize collective bargaining by California teachers.

"Existing laws in this field are just not adequate," he said. "The Winton Act (which requires school employers and employees to 'meet and confer' over mutual problems) is not a sufficient tool for carrying out good faith negotiations between teachers and employers."

Moscone predicted "chaos from teacher strikes all over this state" unless his Senate Bill 400 is enacted into law.

"This legislation in no way tampers with existing state law in the area of public employe strikes," he said. "SB 400 would give exclusive bargaining rights to teacher groups to sit down and negotiate teacher wages, working conditions and fringe benefits."

"It would bring an orderly, businesslike system to negotiations... and promises an end to those uncertainties teachers now find in their relationships with employers."

The bill will be strongly attacked as a device leading to strikes," Moscone said. "But that section of the law (dealing with strikes by public employes) is not changed."

"What is changed is the system by which teachers can negotiate a written contract that will result in a much higher standard of performance in the classroom."

Moore, who was born in Los Angeles and is a USC graduate, arrived in Long Beach in 1919 as a math teacher-coach at Poly High School. Advancing through administrative ranks, he became principal of Wilson High in 1932, remaining there until 1947. He retired in 1957 from the local system with the rank of assistant superintendent for secondary schools.

Before coming to Long Beach, Moore was active in CIF, a statewide organization governing high school athletics. He was its president from 1914 to 1954.

"Harry J. Moore has never asked to be recognized for the things he has done for the children of his community," said a spokesman for the civic group which nominated him for the TALB award. "But we in the Downtown Optimist Club feel there is no other person we know who more earnestly deserves your association's recognition than this man..."

Oil revenue seen boosted

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Bids on the sale of the city's share of crude oil from the "Townlot Area" of the Long Beach Unit, which city officials hope may boost revenue by $450,000 over the next five years, will be opened June 13.

Since 1965, the city has been selling its share of the crude oil to Atlantic Richfield Co. for a price equal to the average posted price for the Wilmington Oil Field.

Last Nov. 6, a sale of 12.5 per cent of crude oil from the tidelands' Parcel A and the Long Beach Oil Development Co. parcel brought bids of 26.5 cents and 32.7 cents over the average posted price.

Because of these "extremely successful" bids, the city's Department of Oil Properties recommended that the city terminate its contract with Atlantic Richfield on the "Townlot Area" crude oil and offer it for bid. The required one-year notice of termination was delivered to Atlantic Richfield last Nov. 28.

Register for summer fun

Registration for summer recreation programs begins Monday in Lakewood.

Adults and children may sign up at city hall for programs that range from instruction in guitar, photography and oil painting to cake decorating and "crafty creations."

Sign-ups for the city's summer baseball leagues for boys 8 to 17 will be Saturday at all city parks.

The city's share of the Townlot oil, which comes from city ownership of parks and similar public property, has averaged about 1,200 barrels per day, and the oil department predicts it would be "at least" 1,000 barrels daily for the next five years.

If the bids on June 13 offer 25 cents a barrel over the posted price, total revenue to the city over the next five years would be increased about $450,000. The bid is on the basis of a bonus per barrel over the average posted price.

To develop trauma center Guild sets $200,000 for St. Mary's gift

St. Mary's Hospital Guild is donating $200,000 toward the development of a regional trauma center at the hospital, the first of its kind in the Harbor area, Mrs. Max Gaspar, guild president, said Friday.

Plans for the comprehensive, multiple injury trauma center were approved by the hospital's board in December. "Now that the guild is nearing the completion of its 1969 pledge, we want to rededicate our efforts," Mrs. Gaspar said. "We see the center as a vital factor in the reduction of trauma as one of the leading causes of death among persons under 40 in Long Beach."

The 270-member guild, founded in 1954, has previously raised more than $400,000 for St. Mary's.

The center is designed to bring to every multiple injury patient the immediate services of a multidisciplinary team of physicians—surgeons, orthopedists, cardiologists, internists—under the direction of a physician coordinator.

It will be located, along with the department of emergency medical service, in the new Bauer Hospital of St. Mary's Medical Center, scheduled to open early in 1974.

Surgical trauma rooms, isolation rooms, X-ray facilities, a core laboratory, along with vital diagnostic, monitoring and therapeutic equipment deemed necessary in the care and transport of the multiple-injured patients will be in the unit to eliminate any delay in treatment.

Supplementary purposes of the trauma center include:

—Development of ground, air and sea transportation systems for critically injured patients, linked together by radio and land-line communications.

—Continuing education of all medical and paramedical teams involved in the transport and care of the trauma victim, including physicians, nurses, administrators and allied health professionals.

—Research into the medical and surgical care of the multiply-injured patient and the effective dissemination of this knowledge.

—Development of the trauma center consultant team which would confer with any medical facility or group requesting information in the field of trauma care.

The hospital's trauma program is already in partial operation. Between 20 and 30 multiple injury trauma patients are treated monthly, under the direction of Dr. Jerry R. Hughes, director of St. Mary's emergency service.

Sister Mary Wilfred, hospital president, expressed the "tremendous gratitude of the sisters and the administrators of the hospital" to the guild.

"Hopefully," she said, it will prove of great significance in our obtaining additional state and federal funding."

Universities serve students, not themselves, group told

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

The California assemblyman heading an effort to reorganize higher education in the state told Long Beach State University professors Friday that his new plan's success "really depends on what you're willing to do."

Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose and chairman of the joint legislative committee on the Master Plan for Higher Education, explained the philosophies behind the legislator's tentative plan during an informal, hour-long session with about 75 educators in the campus Union.

Those philosophies, he told the group, support not only a restructuring of the University of California, State University and community college systems, but a "radical reexamination" of the basic teaching and learning processes as well.

And the joint committee's plan—which Vasconcellos declined to discuss in specific, believing most educators to be familiar with it—aims to foster a whole new outlook on college education in the eyes of everyone from statewide administrators to professors and their students.

The plan, now being written in its final version, first was announced last February and has been scrutinized at 17 public hearings around the state, generally with good reception, said Vasconcellos.

The joint committee's guidelines would replace the state's advisory Coorminating Council on Higher Education with a more flexible and powerful coordinating group; would add students and faculty members as non voting members to governing boards such as the State University trustees; and, among other changes, would put controls on the selection of regular members of those boards to insure diversity.

Such changes, Vasconcellos told listeners, hopefully would have a direct bearing on "the undiscussed, major issue of our times—the issue of the clash of an old way of looking at things and a new way of looking at things; but not at things, at people."

The plan, he said, is critical of California's higher education systems because people at the institutions often tend to ask themselves what's best for the university? rather than what's best for the students.

"Institutions don't exist to serve themselves, but people," said Vasconcellos.

Faculty members at the various campuses, he added, should be willing to examine for themselves "the character of learning" rather than follow traditional patterns of educating.

"Education and learning and growth are ultimately a matter of personal relationship," he said, in which students may be encouraged or discouraged about learning by teaching methods and the restrictions of a system.

During his address to the educators and in a following question-answer session, Vasconcellos repeatedly urged professors to take it upon themselves to launch educational changes to make learning a more sensitive, unfettered experience.

He said he believed the once-hallowed college education was going through a time of "demystification" in which many people are realizing so many degrees have been issued in recent years that they are no longer an automatic key to success.

Several professors opened questioning by agreeing with Vasconcellos, but they cited bottlenecks and problems in dealing with state agencies that have a say in regulating campuses and their funds.

Asked for possible answers to these problems, Vasconcellos continually tossed the ball back to professors during early exchanges, telling them there are "no magic answers except that we (legislators) work at it and you work at it."

'Maytime Concert' set at Cabrillo

A "Maytime Concert," featuring selections by Long Beach Municipal Band and variety entertainment, will be presented Wednesday at 4 p.m. at Cabrillo Playground, 2071 Merrimac Ave.

The concert is free to the public, and is sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department and the Long Beach Arts Council.

In similar discussions around the state, said Vasconcellos, "I find people keep looking in so many places for reasons why not. 'The state won't let us do it, so we won't.'"

"Somehow, you've got to convince these people who are holding the money that it's valuable to spend it (your) way," he said. "It's a major cultural conflict whose resolution will depend on a mass of people making up their minds on one side or the other."

Hearings set on 5 projects

Five major Long Beach projects will be coming before the South Coast Regional Conservation Commission within the next month, the Long Beach Planning Commission has been told.

Permit applications for the City Hall-Main Library, Pacific Terrace Center, Champlin-Mobil-BOD oil operations, and the proposed Regency Towers condominium complex on the bluff at 3500 E. Ocean Blvd. tentatively are set for May 31, the commission was told.

The INA-Brock application for a permit for its hotel-restaurant complex on the Pacific Terrace shoreline tentatively is scheduled for a June 11 hearing, according to Ed Scutnick, head of the Planning Department's environmental division.

The schedules were part of a report by Scutnick on actions by the regional commission on various public and private projects in Long Beach.

Hoot mon! Scots fete set on QM

Queen Mary visitors today will be treated to Scottish-American Day with reduced tour rates for everyone wearing kilts, kilted skirts or tartan sashes.

Insurance office burglary reported

John Turner, of Cypress, told Long Beach police Friday that burglars who crawled through an unlocked window at his insurance office, 5920 Atlantic Ave., took cash and a hand calculator valued at $741.

Highlight of the day's activities will be a Scottish dancing contest in the main lounge beginning at 10 a.m. Organizers of the day's event, the Southern California Highland Dancing Association, anticipate more than 100 participants along with bagpipe music.

Admission rates for those in appropriate Scottish garb will average about one-third the regular price of $3.50 for adults, $2.50 for juniors and $1.25 for children. The Queen Mary tours will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Tests for susceptibility to lung disease slated

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A testing program for susceptibility to a serious lung disorder will begin Wednesday at Hill Junior High School, 1100 Iroquois Ave.

The study, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation, will be conducted by Dr. Jack Lieberman, associate director of respiratory diseases at City of Hope Medical Center, Duarte.

Three hundred students at Hill will be tested for a genetic defect which may predispose to development of the lung disease known as emphysema.

Cosponsors of the project are the Long Beach Unified School District and the Long Beach Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. The latter is giving a four-year grant of $10,000 a year.

Dr. Lieberman and his colleagues have found that as many as one in 20 Americans may have a genetic defect which produces a subnormal level of a blood-protein fraction known as alpha-1-antitrypsin (AAT).

These persons appear to be especially susceptible to development of emphysema if they smoke cigarettes or are exposed to other lung irritants.

Blood samples from seventh-grade pupils at Hill will be analyzed at City of Hope by a test procedure devised by Lieberman.

When an AAT deficiency is found, families of the children will also be tested. Special counseling sessions will follow.

One aim of the project is to evaluate the effectiveness of counseling high-risk persons to avoid smoking and other lung irritants.

Another goal is to obtain more information regarding the prevalence of the genetic defect.

Emphysema is characterized by enlargement and distention of air spaces in the lungs, and shortness of breath varies from mild to severe.

Researchers say that persons who have the AAT deficiency are three to four times more likely to develop emphysema than those who don't have it.

Lieberman has said that he would have no qualms about warning young persons predisposed to emphysema of the dangers of taking up a certain occupation.

"I would warn against occupations such as welder, machinist, working in the steel industry, around coke ovens, any place where a lot of fumes are being given off," he said.

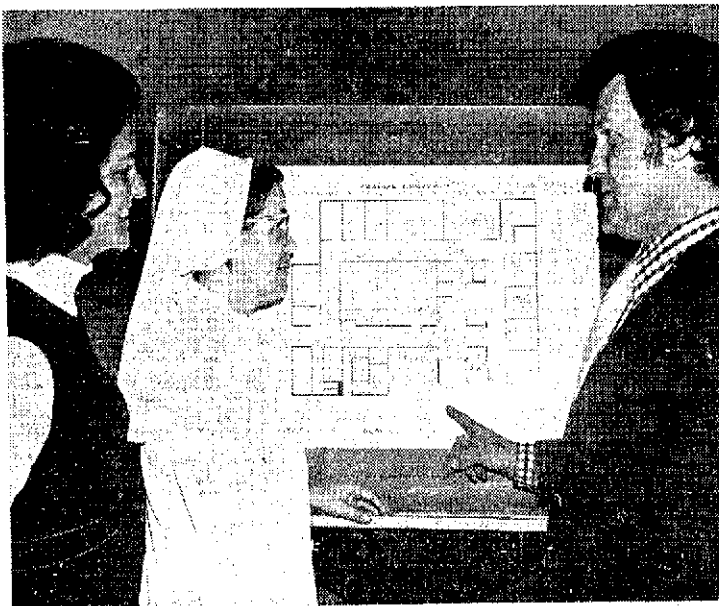

Certain jobs in the textile industry would also be off limits, he said.

"For example," he said, "being exposed to cotton dust might well produce inflammatory effects in the lungs, which would have worse impact on people with antitrypsin deficiency than on normals."

Lieberman said he would particularly warn against the hazard of cigarette smoking.

Emphysema deaths in the United States have increased by more than 200 per cent in the past 10 years.

Health authorities estimate that emphysema deaths now total about 20,000 annually in the United States.

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Begins a long run of incidents of healthy personal change, moments of memorable emotional expression, triumph over past difficulty. Today's natives have quiet working aids in politics, social causes, sometimes are reluctant to become fully involved.

Aries (March 21-April 19): The morning situation is best kept light as you repeat familiar Sunday amenities. Gather friends for an exchange of views.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Begin with an expression of faith. Afterward the day is full of surprises, uninvited people, switches of arrangements.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Being the subject of fun and games may not be comfortable, it may be inevitable. Nothing to do but make the best of it.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Sunday comes with the blessing of serenity. Enjoy what is happening, contribute your creative flair toward constructive goals.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): The intangibles of life are foremost. The less you tinker with material concerns, the better. Take care with travel plans.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): While fulfilling your share of weekend customs, give thought to your resources and how you may turn hobbies and unused items to cash.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're high in your cycle of betterment. Live up to your ideals — you'll find others favor you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's time for quiet enjoyment, thanksgiving for blessings you usually take for granted. Let others make the big moves today.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Social goals may be formulated and progress made. Celebrate this special Sunday with open expressions of love and joy.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put aside material concerns, see the open gate to a more spiritual way of life — use it, allow freedom for others to do likewise.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your faith is visible to all but you. Be open to greater truth, willing to evolve. Select with care a symbol of your love.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): On this rich and varied Sunday many facets of your life come to sensitive expression.

SAYS LBSU CAMPUS PASTOR: Why generation gap? 'New' church forms are really old

By LES RODNEY

"Son, you look just like my grandfather did," an elderly gentleman told David R. Ellingson after the youthful Lutheran intern spoke to a senior citizen church group recently.

Ellingson, who wears long hair, short beard and full mustache, responded "Thank you, that's one of the nicest things I've heard!"

Telling about it in an interview this week, Ellingson said with a smile, "If only my parents hadn't grown up in the age of the crewcut."

Sometimes, he said wistfully, "the son forgets, the grandson remembers."

To Ellingson, 25, Lutheran campus pastor at both Long Beach State University and City College, and intern at St. Timothy Lutheran Church of Lakewood, the warm greeting by the senior citizen had more than passing meaning. It is his belief that the "generation gap" in the churches is often exaggerated, and misleading.

"The battle against the church's routine stodginess, for new ideas and forms, though it doesn't always strictly follow age divisions, seemingly pits young against older church members," he observes. "Naturally, the arsenal of the young is made up of those things they know best—music, art, creativity and freedom."

"THE OLDER SIDE too often forgets it was once young, and the younger side does not realize that it will become older and established. But, fortunately, I see a lot of evidence that the newest and most exciting ideas come from the deep well of tradition. This realization can help close the generation gap."

These rejuvenating ideas, he says, are to be found in music, banners, and the growing concept of small, intimate groups of Christians.

Example: Banners of bright colors and symbolic meaning, seemingly modern and different, in reality are deeply rooted as one of the oldest forms of Christian church art. For Easter, the young adult group at St. Timothy, under Ellingson's direction, created a huge 30-foot sunburst banner in red, orange and yellow against a blue background. Explains Ellingson: "It symbolizes the resurrection of Christ, the sunshine in man's lives, the light of the world." It was well received, and will remain hanging in the church for a while.

On music: "After a rousing 'youth' service not long ago," Ellingson relates, "I asked an elderly woman sitting at the back of the church how she liked our contemporary youth folk songs. She replied in a crackly yet forceful voice 'It was wonderful, but we used to sing those songs much louder when I was at camp years ago.'"

He told of going to hear singer Aretha Franklin in Los Angeles. "What she did, in modern improvisation, was like antiphonal, with responses from the audience. My friend said 'Wow, it's like Bach, Hayden!'"

FOLK MUSIC, he says, is thought of as young peoples music. "It's not. It's really just people music. Woody Guthrie's music is an example in modern times. You know, some people think they'll only hear organ music in heaven! Hundreds of years ago, Luther made it a singing church, he used folk tunes, tunes he heard in the street."

Then, he says, what Luther did is sealed by some into a permanent, unchangeable form, ignoring

ELLINGSON
Renewing the Past

the fact that Luther alive today would listen for and use the idiom of today.

"Tradition can be a millstone around the neck of the church if it is used merely as an excuse to resist change and new ideas," the campus pastor says, "but it can also be the well from which our thirsty spiritual imaginations can drink, for the 'greening' of the Christian church."

"You can easily explain to older people how new ideas come from the past. They are open to the explanation, but the effort must be made."

The feeling of life and vibrancy is important to young people, he says.

"I was speaking at City College on the family. A girl student said later she had sworn she would never go to a Lutheran church again, she had been forced to go and didn't like it. After hearing our talk, she said she'd like the address of our church."

"This kind of thing is not a sophisticated reaction, based on theological differences. It's subjective."

INDEPENDENT PRESS TELEGRAM RELIGION

are attracted to a more exciting-looking, emotional worship experience, such as the publicized Costa Mesa youth group. In his own church, Ellingson says, some young people are torn between the two, though they have not "defected." And how does Ellingson feel about this "charismatic" phenomenon?

"There's validity in some of it," he replies. "The mainline churches must rediscover emotional experience. However those young people also need the more rounded Christian concerns of the traditional church."

"The church shouldn't just reject what these youngsters are doing," he urges. "Most people won't even listen to it, their minds are set. The analogy I use with my students is that human beings are like organs, there are many notes, different stops to be used. It needn't be either or, it should be both."

Ellingson is one of three campus pastors at the university. How does he estimate the importance of this ministry? Does it make an impact on any significant number of students?

"The numbers game is the wrong way to estimate it," he says. "In my various contacts there I may work with 100 students. It's a question of quality. If you affect one, he or she will affect others."

"We may not be as visible as some other things on the campus. It's like you don't always see the salt, but the flavor is there."

The minority role on the campus and within his own denomination doesn't faze him. He sees it as a challenge.

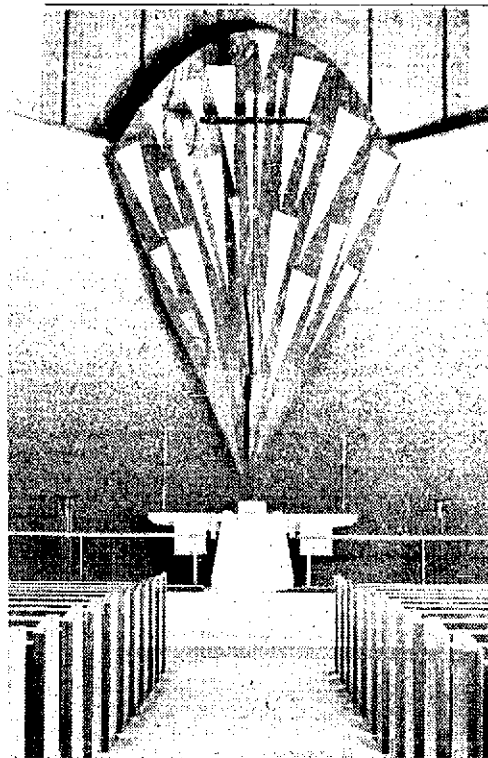

"There's always a creative minority in every society and time," he says. "It's the hope of the church. Sometimes they give up and quit. We need them to stay in and fight, to stick it out, to take issue with some of the sacred cows, not to despair after one defeat, or if things don't change as fast as they'd like. Every effort helps to fertilize parched ground."

He smiled. "You know, the creative minority is a very biblical thing."

ON THE CAMPUS, aware that many students are not church members, the young pastors try to introduce a pastoral quality to their work, Ellingson notes. "When someone is in the hospital, for instance, we'll visit." He also sees ample biblical mandate for social concerns, such as meeting with the farm workers of the Coachella Valley to ascertain their needs, and what he sees as the necessity for a Christian attitude on the question of amnesty for the Vietnam draft evaders.

Ecology, still a hot topic among young people, is another important connective to the past, he believes. "It helps bring back some of the aliveness of nature which we have neglected," he says. "I can't understand how anyone could try to misuse the Bible to downgrade nature."

Ellingson is the son of a Lutheran minister. Like being the son of a career military man, or an aerospace engineer, this can mean a lot of moving around. Born in Minnesota, he grew up in New York State and Iowa, was educated at Luther College of Iowa and Yale. He will be ordained this fall at St. Timothy. "The day will be a special one for me," he says, "but not to COLORFUL BANNER made for Easter by young people of St. Timothy Lutheran Church of Lakewood has deep roots in Christian church art, remains hanging for a while by popular request—of young and older members.

the students I work with. To them, I will still be the same person."

And that's the way he likes it.

For that too goes back to the roots of his faith, when the work of the disciple was more important than any titles.

"It's a day of alternative life styles among many young people," Ellingson muses. "Alternatives are sure needed these days, but the best way may not be trying to create something out of nothing, but to follow the hint of the Easter message, to breathe new life into that which has gone before. Perhaps, too, to be a part of the church's resurrection."

Spanish lecture

A Mother's Day lecture in Spanish will be heard Sunday, 7 a.m. over KWKW, AM 1300 on the dial, by Mrs. Catheran H. Anwander of Santiago, Chile, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

Presb. meet will weigh big issues

United Presbyterians from across the nation will make major policy decisions on the work of the 3-million member denomination when the church's 185th General Assembly meets in Omaha Tuesday through May 23rd.

The General Assembly is the highest legislative body of the church. About 2,000 persons, including approximately 740 commissioners (voting delegates) are expected to attend.

Questions ranging from Assembly statements on social issues to the organization of the church's own structures will come before the commissioners for decisions. Among them will be the matter of whether the denomination should rejoin the Consultation on Church Union.

Two proposals from the Advisory Council on Discipleship and Worship also will be considered, one of them supporting full voting membership of young people at all levels of the church, and the other advocating further study on the work of the Holy Spirit.

Among the first actions of the General Assembly will be election of a Moderator (presiding officer and highest elective official of the denomination) to succeed C. Willard Heckel, professor at Rutgers University. Candidates announced thus far are Rev. Henry W. Anderson, pastor of First Presbyterian of La Grange, Ill.; Rev. Benjamin J. Anderson, pastor of Richardson Memorial in Philadelphia; Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, former general secretary of the World Council of Churches; Rev. Carl G. Howie, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian of Detroit; and Rev. Clinton M. Marsh, executive on the staff of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Act happy to be happy

A pretty rare old man appeared on a popular TV program. He received a prize for winning a contest — and he stole the show with his exuberant spirit and quick wit. "It's easy to see," remarked the admiring master of ceremonies, "that you are one very happy man. What's the secret of being as happy as you are? Let us in on it."

"Why, son," the old man answered, "it's as plain as the nose on your face. When I wake up in the morning, I have two choices. One is to be unhappy; the other is to be happy. And I want you to know, son, that I'm not as dumb as I may look. I'm smart enough to choose happiness. I just make up my mind to be happy — that's all there is to it."

NOW I KNOW we could write this off as superficial, just an old man being a bit bawdy. Well, here it is a quote from someone who certainly was not superficial or bawdy, a man by the name of Abraham Lincoln. "Most people," said Lincoln, "are about as happy as they make up their minds to be."

A young couple, married long enough for their older children to be in their teens, were having a hard time making a go of it with each other. Most of their time together was spent in mutual criticism, grumbling, bickering, and always complaining. In this unhappy atmosphere marriage seemed headed for the proverbial rocks.

Finally the husband decided to get some counseling. After listening sympathetically to the young man's story of domestic discord I suggested, "Why not simply try being happy around your wife? See how much of the time you can act happy around home."

"Be happy around my wife?" the man protested.

"You don't know the woman!"

"Sure, it may be tough going but you used to be happy with her."

"Yes, but she sure has changed."

"Maybe you've changed, too. I seem to remember her telling me that when you were first married that you made everything exciting around home because you were always happy, consistently up-beat. Couldn't just be you've become a grouch, have you?"

The young husband agreed though somewhat doubtfully to give the advice a try. So that evening approaching his front door he tried whistling. Opening the door he called cheerily, "Yoo-hoo! Where is everyone?"

"Why, I'm out here," came a surprised voice from the kitchen. "What's the matter with you?" she asked suspiciously.

He gave her a big kiss and said, "Come on, leave that cooking a few minutes and let's walk around outside and smell the flowers and get a load of this evening sunshine."

Hesitantly she followed him out, looking apprehensive, and wondering what kind of trick this might be.

That whole evening he was sociable and good-humored. At dinner he cracked some jokes, got off a few wise cracks. He had the kids in gales of laughter.

"Mommy," asked the oldest boy, "what's got over Dad? He's a riot, really a funny guy."

"I've been thinking he was funny for some time," she answered dryly, "... only not the way you mean."

THIS HUSBAND actually got such a bang out of this new behavior that he kept it up the next evening, and the next, and the next. The longer he continued acting happy, the less effort it took — the more it seemed to come natural, actually.

FAREWELL, AND WELCOME

Rev. Rufus V. Calhoun, left, pastor of New Hope Church of Christ Holiness, 1119 Rhea St., was feted by the congregation and visiting dignitaries last Sunday before leaving with Mrs. Calhoun to answer a call to Memphis, Tenn. He chats with the new pastor, Rev. Donald Brown, who acknowledged many visitors, including members of the Calhoun family gathered from many states.

the more he enjoyed it. He began to realize that he was having a better time this way.

One evening a week or so later when he got home he found the dining table set with the best silver and china, and it had been prettied-up with flowers and soft candlelight.

"What's going on?" one of the kids demanded. "What's so special? Is it a birthday or something?"

"I don't quite know, darling. Maybe it is," the mother replied softly.

She had come up with her own new technique for living in response to her husband's initiative. She felt the stirring of new hope. Maybe the marriage could be saved after all. Anyway, she resolved to do her part. And proved it a happy outcome, for the marriage that was almost on the rocks got a new lease on life. This good result came about because first one partner, and then the two together resolved to be happy, began acting happy, and actually became happy.

Of course, happiness does not come merely by wanting it. If that is all you do about it, then at best it may come, only briefly, fleetingly, here today and gone tomorrow. But if you make up your mind to be happy and then start acting happy, you are likely to have happy outcomes.

Bibles in offices of doctors, dentists

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Gideons International, the organization which provides hotels and motels with bibles, is now supplying doctors' and dentists' offices, too.

Michigan Gideons placed 5,000 bibles in doctors' and dentists' offices last year and plan to place another 10,000 in offices this year.

Briefly . . .

Mothers-in-law, Judaism advice, evangelical gains

Mother's Day, officially recognized in 1908, has reached social security status—it's 65 this year. Though not a religious day, it has always been closely associated with the values of faith, and it is therefore no coincidence that it always falls on Sunday.

With all the sentiment about mother, at least one local church gets in a kind thought for that often maligned person—the mother-in-law. The very sound of the phrase evokes corny jokes, but at Covenant Presbyterian, the Sunday sermon entitled "What Can You Expect From a Mother-in-Law?" will treat it as potentially one of the most precious ties in the family circle.

Would Susan Lafaucherie today be for or against those in the Episcopal Church who are campaigning—so far unsuccessfully—for the ordination of women?

'TIS THE SEASON of church denomination conventions. The General Assembly of the United Presbyterians convenes Tuesday in Omaha, with perhaps the most interest in the "comeback" of that veteran of the religious wars, Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, one of the candidates for the church's top presiding office of moderator. Blake, now 66, is recently retired chief officer of the World Council of Churches and was formerly chief executive of the UPC.

THE RECENTLY concluded 31st annual convention of the National Association of Evangelicals in Portland, Ore. said evangelical churches are growing at a time of lack of growth generally in American religion.

The association now claims 33 denominations with 3.5 million members. Dr. Clyde Taylor, general director, said membership has increased roughly one million in the last decade. He also said that as many as 20 million persons who he would classify as evangelicals belong to churches outside the N.A.E. Definitions come in here, for many, or most, in the so-called mainline churches would certainly not reject the word "evangelical."

The NAE's perhaps most significant statistics said their missionaries have steadily increased in numbers while fewer missionaries are being sent overseas by the mainline denominations. The report said the N.A.E. includes 65 missionary agencies supporting 8,000 U.S. and Canadian missionaries with budgets totaling $50 million annually.

Among denominations in the association are the Assembly of God, the Baptist General Convention, the Christian and Missionary Alliance, and other smaller conservative groups.

AMERICAN JUDAISM, divided like Gaul into three parts, was advised this week to follow the lead of some Protestants and develop jointly used buildings to stop a needless drain on resources.

Present duplication of facilities in many areas by Orthodox, Conservative and Reform Jews was termed "wasteful and absurd" by Philip Klutznick of Chicago, influen-

Pope John—will he be named a saint?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Next month marks the 10th anniversary of the death of Angelo Roncalli, possibly the greatest Christian leader of the century.

Who was Angelo Roncalli? Only a small fraction of the people of the world were aware that was his given name. In the latter years of his life, he was better known affectionately to millions as Papa John — "Papa Giovanni" to Romans. To the world at large he was Pope John XXIII.

During a brief reign of less than five years on the papal throne, he made more profound and far-reaching contributions to the health of the Christian movement than any pope of recent history.

Consider only a few of his achievements:

—He ended 500 years of cold war among Christians and created between Catholics and Protestants a new "ecumenical spirit" of mutual respect and cooperation.

—He summoned the Second Vatican Council and through it launched the most sweeping reforms of the Catholic

'PAPA GIOVANNI'
Pope John XXIII

Church in a thousand years.

—He won worldwide respect and affection, not only from Christians of every denomination, but from Jews, Moslems, Hindus, Buddhists, Humanists and Marxists.

—He restored to the papacy, through the sheer power of his personal goodness, a prestige it had not enjoyed since the time of the Borgias.

There have been widespread suggestions that Pope John be named a saint. The official word from the Papal Court in Rome is that the "cause" of John XXIII — that is, the question of whether he was truly a saint — is being "investigated through normal procedures."

Some are accusing the Vatican of stalling. Critics — and there are many — say cardinals of the Roman Curia who never approved of Pope John's reforms hope to postpone indefinitely giving him the posthumous endorsement implied by canonization.

There is another consideration that doubtless enters into the Vatican's procrastination. Pope Paul VI, who was Pope John's chosen successor, has never achieved the affection and respect of his predecessor.

Pope Paul's critics say that for him to declare his predecessor a saint — which he has authority to do any time he sees fit — would dramatize an eclipse of papal prestige which has taken place since John's death.

While some may call him a poor pope, Paul VI is a good man, and he certainly would not stoop personally to withholding canonization of John

"Woe to you—you whited sepulchre—you abomination of desolation—you son of perdition—you..."

XXIII in order to protect his own vanity.

But he doesn't have to do it personally. He has only to listen to the voices of curia courtiers who tell him that the "cause" is being handled "in the normal and proper way." That explanation probably sounds reasonable to Paul VI, who once was a Vatican bureaucrat himself.

While John XXIII remains officially uncanonized, millions of Catholics and non-Catholics already have proclaimed in their hearts the saintliness of this peasant from Bergamo who was one of the most humble, compassionate and courageous figures the church has produced since Francis of Assisi.

As Belgium's Cardinal Leo Suenens put it, John XXIII "left men closer to God, and the world a better place."

Carson Baptist Open House

Celebrating the completion of a new fellowship-educational building, Carson Baptist Church, 520 E. 228th St., is holding an open house starting Sunday.

Tours for guests will be conducted by members, before and after the services, which will be 7:30 p.m. through the week, 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday. The new building more than doubles the usable space of the church. Most of the construction was done by members.

FROM THE PULPIT

DR. FRANK COLLINS

A beautiful pin will be given to each mother attending Calvary this Sunday morning at 9:45 when we begin our unified Mother's Day service. Remember that our buses will be leaving the church at 11:45 to return the children home. Today's services conclude the Dr. Fred Brown-Strat Shufelt Crusade.

Last Sunday over 100 people responded to the invitations. Seldom does one have such glorious experiences as we are having in Calvary today, by all means don't miss these services. They do not come our way often.

Corsages will also be given this Sunday to the oldest and youngest mother and the mother with the most children present. Pins and orchids will be awarded at the beginning of the 9:45 services only, so don't be late!

Bring Mother to Calvary Sunday if you do not have a church home. It will be one of our greatest days.

Be sure to watch the TV program on Sunday morning and Monday night, and listen on radio to "Meetin' Time at Calvary."

Come to Calvary! Calvary is for you!

God comforts those who are humble before him. Isaiah 66:13 says, "As one whom his mother comforts, so will I comfort you." This is a touching scene. A good mother loves her child. Loving the child teaches the child to love her. She can easily comfort the child because the child trusts a faithful mother. Are you a faithful mother? You can tell by the actions of your child toward you.

Bingham identity sought in victim's bones

MARTINEZ (U) — A check is being made to determine if a murder victim's bones are the remains of Stephen Bingham, accused of supplying the gun authorities said convict George Jackson used in his fatal attempt to flee San Quentin, a coroner said Friday.

Bingham, 31, vanished Aug. 21, 1971, the day of the San Quentin Prison violence in which Jackson, two other convicts and three prison guards were killed.

Coroner Willis Cullison said the skull and scattered bones found in wooded Belling Canyon April 20 near Moraga bore evidence of "blows to the head and body by a heavy sharp instrument."

The investigation that the victim may be Bingham will be made routinely because Bingham has been on a missing and wanted list since 1971, the coroner said.

Cullison said the slaying victim was a white male, 30 to 35 years old, and of slender build about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches tall. The jaw bone showed extensive and expensive dental work, he said.

The coroner said the death probably occurred from one to three years ago. The bones apparently had been washed downstream in the canyon to the point where they were found by hikers, he said.

Bingham's father, Probate Judge Alfred M. Bingham of Salem, Conn., said he knew of no out of the ordinary dental work done on his son.

Bingham, an attorney who had defended militant activists, left his Berkeley home the day of what prison authorities called Jackson's breakout attempt.

No trace of Bingham has been reported since. He was 31, 5 feet 11 inches tall.

Couple charged in baby's death

VALLEJO (U) — An ex-truck driver and his wife were jailed Friday in the murder of their 2-year-old baby who was found beaten to death in a weed patch, police said.

The little girl, clad only in diapers, was buried here as a "Baby Jane Doe" because no one knew who she was.

POLICE Capt. John Lacey said Frank Clay, 29, and his wife Susan, 21, were arrested Thursday night as they were moving from their Santa Rosa trailer house.

"We believe these are the parents of that child," Lacey said. "We just feel they had something to do with it." Lacey said police "cannot divulge at this time" why they believed these were Baby Jane's parents.

He said the key to their arrest was that the child was found April 22 but the parents "did not report their baby missing. Isn't it logical to assume they would have?"

Both were booked for investigation of murder and will face arraignment here next week, Lacey said.

THE BABY was buried last Saturday after 185 people filed through a funeral chapel when the baby's photo appeared in a newspaper. Men at Mare Island Naval Shipyard bought a headstone for her grave and churchwomen collected $52 to help pay for her burial plot.

The coroner's office said Baby Jane died of a skull fracture and internal injuries.

"Our investigation has a lot of loose ends that we are trying to gather in, and we can't divulge what led us to them yet," Lacey said.

He said Clay "left his truck-driving job here three or four weeks ago.

Margaret wins the war of words

RAMONA, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Riggs tried to soften up Margaret Court with a fusillade of words Friday in their eyeball-to-eyeball meeting prior to Sunday's $10,000 challenge tennis match, but the Australian girl came out with the win.

Margaret arrived at the San Diego Country Estates with husband Barry and 14-month-old son, Danny, the latter wearing a large button which read: "Bobby Riggs, BLEAH!"

"There are 30,000 of these buttons being worn by the women in Canada," the 30-year-old Mrs. Court told Riggs.
"The women up there are really excited about the match."
"I don't have a chance with all of this and playing on Mother's Day, too," lamented the 55-year-old former Wimbledon champion, who is a 7-5 favorite.
Then, Bobby proceeded to hammer away at his Sunday opponent on a barrage of different subjects.

"Bill Talbert says he wants us to play a return match at Forest Hills for $20,000," Riggs said. "Do you want to take him up on that?"
"I've been too busy practicing for this match — I will have to think about that later," the Australian said.
Riggs attempted to talk Margaret into using a livelier ball in their best-of-three set match, but Margaret insisted on playing with a heavy duty ball for which she had won a toss Thursday.

"You told me at Richmond that it didn't make any difference what kind of ball we used," Riggs said. "You play a more aggressive game. The livelier ball would be to your advantage."
"I won the toss. I will stick with this ball," Margaret replied.
"Don't you think it would be better if you did not come to the net and try to put the ball away too quickly?"
"I will play my game," Margaret said firmly.

Riggs asked if she had played many men, and she replied that she had, beating most of them.
Riggs kept up a constant stream of conversation and Margaret, who vowed that she would not be psyched by the notorious tennis hustler, merely smiled and rarely replied.
"I am not a women's libber," the No. 1 woman player said.
"But I would like to win this match for the sake of women's tennis."

Marichal falls at Candlestick

BY GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — When Juan Marichal takes on the Dodgers in Candlestick Park, Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder takes the game off the boards as "no contest."
He'd sooner quote odds on how windy it'll be in Candlestick, which is only slightly less certain than Marichal beating the Dodgers.
Friday night, before 21,234 Candlestickers, the Dodgers beat the odds — and Marichal — 3-2 for their sixth win in their last seven starts behind the six-hit pitching of Al Downing, Pete Richert and Jim Brewer.
The victory was Downing's fourth in five decisions, and for seven innings he was shooting for his second successive shutout.
But the Giants, never as San Franciscan Joe Ferguson popped a sacrifice fly to bring home the decisive run.

It was only third time the Dodgers have managed to topple Marichal in Candlestick but the second time in a row. The last time was in 1971 — he didn't face the Dodgers in '72 — and the only time he was defeated by Los Angeles was in 1968, after he'd won 20 in a row.
Restricted to four hits but not runs the first five innings by Marichal, the Dodgers "struck" in a different manner in the sixth to take a 2-0 advantage.
Marichal walked Ferguson and Willie Crawford with one out and then Ron Cey flied to center for the second out. Bill Russell grounded sharply to third baseman Dave Kingman, who let the ball slide through his legs. Two runs and many boos for the former USC star who also popped out and struck out three times.
The Dodgers added what turned out to be the decisive run in the top of the eighth when Manny Mota opened with a triple, a line shot over center-fielder Garry Maddox' head, and then scored on Ferguson's sacrifice fly. It was Fergie's 22nd RBI.
Downing got the first Giants in the eighth but ran into trouble when he walked Tito Fuentes and Chris Speier shot a double down the left line that scored Fuentes.
It ended a string of 19 consecutive scoreless innings for Downing, who blanked St. Louis in his previous start.
It also ended his hopes of going the distance against the Giants.
He was replaced by Pete Richert, brought in solely to pitch to Willie McCovey. He did his job, getting the big first baseman to hit a high left. But the ball stayed up in the wind and Mota, who should have had the ball for the final out, let it bounce in for a triple that scored Speier to make it

DODGER OF DAY

AL DOWNING earned fourth win with 3-2 victory over San Francisco.
an easy touch anywhere but especially tough in Candlestick where they'd won 14 of their first 21 home games, chased him with two runs in the eighth and first Richert and then Brewer had to be summoned.
The victory also tightened the race slightly in the National League's Western Division where the Giants have been free-wheeling since opening day. The Dodgers are fourth, 4½ games behind.

For the Dodgers to clip the Giants is one thing. To whip Marichal — and in his own backyard — is another.
Marichal, who pitched a complete game 7-3 victory over the Dodgers three weeks ago in Dodger Stadium for his 37th career triumph over the O'Malleys, entered Friday night's match with 21 wins in 23 Candlestick decisions against his favorite patriots.
But he surrendered two runs in the sixth, both unearned, and then the game-winner in the eighth.

Ryan clubbed by White Sox, 7-4

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Trivia test:
When was the last time Nolan Ryan started a game and did not strike out a batter?
Answer: Friday.
Believe it or not, it happened.
Ryan, the fabled Express, could not survive a five-run first-inning onslaught by the Chicago White Sox and the Angels went down to a 7-4 defeat, their fifth in a row.
Ryan, in fact, got only one batter out and left the premises hurriedly, the victim of all five runs and a badly bruised earned run average.
His pride, however, did not appear too badly damaged.
"I was throwing well, better than I have in my last four or five starts," Ryan said. "I just made some bad pitches and they hit them."
"I've never seen his fastball hit that hard," exclaimed manager Bobby Winkles.
For the streaking Chisox, Friday's success was their 12th and 13 games and Winkles proclaimed tonight's game as well as Sunday afternoon's series finale as "vastly important to us."
If the Angels succumb two more times to the Sox, their season might be over.
The Sox stung Ryan for four hits — three of them well-hit doubles — and five runs before the Angel starter could work up a sweat. Dick Allen heaped a final indignity upon Ryan by stealing home with the bases loaded.
Allen's daring maneuver might have turned the inning around.
The two runners behind him also moved into scoring position when Ryan's hurried throw to the plate rolled away from catcher Jeff Torborg and designated hitter Mike Andrews followed with a two-run double.
That made it 4-0 and Ryan exited after An-draws' hit. Steve Barber appeared on the scene to surrender Jorge Orta's single which produced the fifth and final run of the round.

"I said to myself if he gives me as much of a lead as he did on the previous pitch, then I'm going," Allen revealed later.
"He's probably the best
ANGEL OF DAY
BOB OLIVER had two hits and drove in three runs as Angels were beaten by Chicago, 7-4.
base stealer on that team," Winkles applauded.
Pat Kelly opened the big inning with a double and scored on Allen's booming two-bagger. A walk to Bill Melton and the first of four successive singles by Ken Henderson loaded the bases and set up Allen's surprising dash to the plate.

"A good pitch would have nailed him," Ryan said. "I caught him coming out of the corner of my eye and hurried my throw. It crossed up Jeff and he couldn't hold it."
Stan Bahnsen, with relief help from Terry Forster in the ninth, won it for Chicago, improving his record to 5-2. He yielded just six hits.
Bahnsen retired the first 11 Angels he faced before consecutive singles by Ken Berry, Frank Robinson and Bob Oliver gave the home team its first run in the fourth.
Oliver tripled home two more runs in the sixth after a single and an error as the Angels drew close at 5-3 but the Sox retaliated with two of their own in the seventh to put the game safely out of reach.
Allen instigated this rally with another double — his third hit of the night — and Melton walked. Ron Perranoski replaced a tiring Barber at this juncture and served up run-scoring singles to Henderson and Eddie Leon.
A walk to pinch-hitter Vada Pinson and Jim Spencer's triple gave the Angels their final tally in the seventh.
Ryan has now yielded 21 runs (17 earned) and 36 hits in his last 35 innings,

Ryan winner in slow 4:07

TORONTO — Jim Ryan hurried through the last lap to nip Jerome Howe in 4:07.7 in a snail-like mile as the professional track tour resumed Friday night before a small crowd of 5,164 in Toronto. Kip Keino was in Kenya.

Dodgers nip S.F., 3-2

Marichal falls at Candlestick

Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — When Juan Marichal takes on the Dodgers in Candlestick Park, Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder takes the game off the boards as "no contest."
He'd sooner quote odds on how windy it'll be in Candlestick, which is only slightly less certain than Marichal beating the Dodgers.
Friday night, before 21,234 Candlestickers, the Dodgers beat the odds — and Marichal — 3-2 for their sixth win in their last seven starts behind the six-hit pitching of Al Downing, Pete Richert and Jim Brewer.
The victory was Downing's fourth in five decisions, and for seven innings he was shooting for his second successive shutout.
But the Giants, never

as San Franciscan Joe Ferguson popped a sacrifice fly to bring home the decisive run.
It was only third time the Dodgers have managed to topple Marichal in Candlestick but the second time in a row. The last time was in 1971 — he didn't face the Dodgers in '72 — and the only time he was defeated by Los Angeles was in 1968, after he'd won 20 in a row.
Restricted to four hits but not runs the first five innings by Marichal, the Dodgers "struck" in a different manner in the sixth to take a 2-0 advantage.
Marichal walked Ferguson and Willie Crawford with one out and then Ron Cey flied to center for the second out. Bill Russell grounded sharply to third baseman Dave Kingman, who let the ball slide through his legs. Two runs and many boos for the former USC star who also popped out and struck out three times.
The Dodgers added what turned out to be the decisive run in the top of the eighth when Manny Mota opened with a triple, a line shot over center-fielder Garry Maddox' head, and then scored on Ferguson's sacrifice fly. It was Fergie's 22nd RBI.
Downing got the first Giants in the eighth but ran into trouble when he walked Tito Fuentes and Chris Speier shot a double down the left line that scored Fuentes.
It ended a string of 19 consecutive scoreless innings for Downing, who blanked St. Louis in his previous start.
It also ended his hopes of going the distance against the Giants.
He was replaced by Pete Richert, brought in solely to pitch to Willie McCovey. He did his job, getting the big first baseman to hit a high left. But the ball stayed up in the wind and Mota, who should have had the ball for the final out, let it bounce in for a triple that scored Speier to make it

DODGER OF DAY

AL DOWNING earned fourth win with 3-2 victory over San Francisco.
an easy touch anywhere but especially tough in Candlestick where they'd won 14 of their first 21 home games, chased him with two runs in the eighth and first Richert and then Brewer had to be summoned.
The victory also tightened the race slightly in the National League's Western Division where the Giants have been free-wheeling since opening day. The Dodgers are fourth, 4½ games behind.

For the Dodgers to clip the Giants is one thing. To whip Marichal — and in his own backyard — is another.
Marichal, who pitched a complete game 7-3 victory over the Dodgers three weeks ago in Dodger Stadium for his 37th career triumph over the O'Malleys, entered Friday night's match with 21 wins in 23 Candlestick decisions against his favorite patriots.
But he surrendered two runs in the sixth, both unearned, and then the game-winner in the eighth.

Supersonic coup Bill Russell to coach Seattle

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The Seattle Supersonics pulled off what they called "one of the major deals in American sports history" Friday when they signed former Boston superstar Bill Russell to a five-year contract as coach and general manager of the National Basketball Assn. team.
The deal was concluded and announced jointly by Sam Schulman, Sonics' president and owner, and Richard D. Covey, Russell's attorney.
"It gives me extreme pleasure in developing an association between this team and Russell, the undisputed dean of professional basketball," Schulman said.
"I consider him to be the most dominant player the game has known and the finest coach in the game's history."
No money figures were announced, but over a five-year period the contract must be in at least the high six figures and probably seven.
Russell, who just concluded a sports-casting position for the NBA game of the week series, replaces Tom Nissalke, who was fired in January as the Sonics struggled through the worst season in their brief history.
The signing of Russell was considered a major coup by Schulman, who has spent millions of dollars in salaries and legal fees buying and signing highly touted players who have failed to mould into a team that could provide him with a championship.
Russell was both a player and player-coach for the Boston Celtics but has been out of basketball for four years except as a radio and television commentator.
Russell said the Seattle job was the seventh basketball post offered him since his retirement.
"I'm going to Seattle with an open mind about the players," he said. "I'll take a look at everybody and see what they can or can't do."
"I know what I'd like to have but nobody can have all they like to have. I'll have to take what I have and make the most of it."
Russell promised to be a disciplinarian, quipping, "I'm going to take a baseball bat with me."

Race for pole starts at Indianapolis today

Combined News Services

INDIANAPOLIS — The battle for the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's million-dollar payoff opens today — with the start of 500-mile Memorial Day auto race qualifications amid indications the 200 mph lap may be more elusive than originally anticipated.
Nobody came close to that barrier in two weeks of practice, and now there is doubt it will materialize this year.
Close to 250,000 fans were expected for the "battle for the pole" that normally goes to the fastest first-day qualifier. If all those who drew for positions in the qualifying lineup get their chance in the 10-mile test runs, the pole sitter will indeed be determined by late today.
Otherwise, he may not be known until Sunday.
The time trials will be concluded next weekend, with the 33 fastest combinations comprising the May 28 lineup.
Larry Dickson, a 33-year-old former midget champion, will get the first shot at the official timing clocks. He will be followed to the line by hot shots Peter Revson, Gary Bettenhausen and A. J. Foyt.
Art Pollard, a 44-year-old campaigner from Medford, Ore., turned in Friday's fastest unofficial speed as formal practice ended.
Pollard, driving a Cobra-Eagle, flashed around the 2½-mile speedway at 193.923 mph.
Three others, including last year's winner, Mark Donohue, exceeded the 193-mph mark. Mike Mosley posted a 193.673, Donohue 193.465, Mario Andretti 193.299 and Bobby Unser 193.298.
Foyt, a three-time winner of the richest race in the world, finally got his car moving and recorded a lap at 192.184 mph.

Norwalk's Franklin wins duel

McMullen handed first season loss

Pat McMullen finally met his match Friday afternoon.

The Lynwood righthander duelled Norwalk's John Franklin on even terms for nine innings before relinquishing a run in the tenth which beat him 2-1.

McMullen's setback was his first of the campaign after ten successive victories, eight of which were shutouts.

Lynwood scored its only run in the fourth inning on its only two hits of the contest.

Leading off the home half of the tenth, Ron Norman singled for Norwalk. Tom Johnson followed with a double and McMullen was handed his first loss.

In other San Gabriel Valley action, Jim Falls was given his first start of the season and responded with an eight-inning shut-out for Excelsior, 1-0 win.

Warren closed out 7-3 its year with a victory over Bellflower.

The Bears tallied three runs in the sixth inning to put the game away.

Gahr gains berth

Gahr High rallied for four runs in the sixth inning and Mike Alsobrook, who won Tuesday's game, helped out pitcher Cory McCutchan in the seventh inning to help the Gladiators nip Mayfair 6-4, and earn a CIF, 3-A berth.

In other league finales, Neff blanked Glenn 7-0 and Artesia nipped Cerritos 2-1.

Alsobrook, who tied the school record for most wins in one year, bailed out McCutchan in the seventh inning when Mayfair scored three times.

McCutchan walked two and with one out Ron Stevens lashed a run-scoring single for the Monsoons. McCutchan got Mike Popovich to ground out for the second out but Mark Pederson singled in two more runs. Alsobrook was called in and he fanned Dale Piner to end the game.

Gahr (10-5) was led by Tom Orozco, who drove in three runs with two doubles and a sacrifice fly.

Neff ended the league season like it started, with a winning streak.

The Trojans (11-4) won their last five games while allowing only one earned run to score.

Rick Costello allowed only four hits while picking up his second league win. Costello fanned nine.

"It was the best game I've seen him pitch in two years," said coach Hank Freese about his junior hurler who missed most of the season.

Neff scored six runs against Glenn's Rick Carter. With one out in the second inning Jeff Turner doubled and was singled to third by Vince Torres. Dave Kesting tripled but Turner was called out at second base — Torres scoring. Rick Harmon drove home Kesting.

In the sixth, the Trojans added four insurance runs when Turner led off with a single and Torres sent him to second with a base hit. Rich Harmon singled to load the bases. Dan Carroll singled in two runs and Keith Maycock scored Harmon with a sacrifice fly. Carroll scored on a bad throw home.

Artesia High (9-6) edged the Dons by scoring in the sixth inning when Greg Stevens scrambled home a wild pitch. Rick Dunaway picked up his second league win, striking out seven.

Russ rout AAU champs

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The Russian National basketball team, stung by a 4-2 loss in its series with the American all-stars, took out its fury Friday on America's AAU champions, 109-87.

The Marathon Oil team from Lexington was off to a fast start, leading by seven points after the first seven minutes, but the Russians rallied late in the first half and coasted to an easy victory.

The AAU team was beefed up at the last minute by three players from the University of Kentucky, including Jim Andrews who already has signed with the Seattle Super-Sonics.

Two of those — Andrews and sophomore Kevin Grevey — accounted for 43 of the AAU team points. Grevey had 22, Andrews 21.

George Bryant, a 5-10 graduate of Eastern Kentucky University, led the AAU team with 23 and those three were the only Americans in double figures.

Ivan Dvornii and Aleksandr Sahnkov led the Russians with 24 points each, while Aleksandr Goncharov added 14 and Jaak Salumets 12.

"They did about what we expected except that we didn't expect such good shooting," said Grevey.

"The only way we had a chance to beat them was for us to beat them was for us to shoot well and we didn't," Grevey said.

The AAU team hit only 38 of 103 shots from the field, while the Russians cashed in on 48 of 84.

Andrews hit 10 of 15 field goal attempts and took 16 rebounds, although player-coach Scottie Baesler said the 6-11 senior from Kentucky was so sick that he vomited in the dressing room at halftime.

"It's as simple as this," Baesler said. "We played worse than we usually do and they are a physical team."

The AAU squad used sharp shooting and slick ballhandling early in the first half, but the far more physical Russian team wore the Americans down in the first 11 minutes.

Once the Americans were tired, it simply was no contest.

SECRET WITNESS

"Someone always knows" is the theory behind the Independent, Press-Telegram Secret Witness program. In crimes that the police department has been unable to solve there is always someone who can lend valuable information—but because of fears for one's safety or incrimination or various other reasons—that person is reluctant to come forward. And in crimes where time is an important factor to the police, Secret Witness will be used to obtain that information without delay.

The Independent, Press-Telegram Secret Witness program is designed to relay information concerning any of these cases to the police via the newspaper without ever knowing the name of the Secret Witness. For information leading to arrest and conviction—a reward fund of $100,000 has been established by the I.P.T.

HOW SECRET WITNESS WORKS

Each Thursday and Sunday, the I.P.T. will publish a list of the cases currently on the Secret Witness program... the rewards for each case and all pertinent information.

If you have any data that would be valuable to the police department in solving these crimes—the procedures to follow are...

Call the Secret Witness telephone 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and 12 midnight Monday through Friday or, 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, or mail in your information using this Secret Witness code system:

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself — any name, as long as it's not your own — and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, California 90801.

George Kennedy's objective view of new 'Lost Horizon'

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — When the airplane crashed early in "Lost Horizon" it was predicted all actors aboard would perish in the disaster.

Few, if any, of the stars have spoken out on Ross Hunter's musical version of Frank Capra's landmark film. But George Kennedy, an oscar-winning performer, looks back on "Lost Horizon" objectively.

"It wasn't a blockbuster of a movie," he said, "but it wasn't as bad as the critics said it was either."

"The original picture — Capra's film — is and has been one of my favorite movies. I don't exaggerate when I say I've seen it a couple of dozen times."

"I suppose a lot of people feel the same way. But it's unfair to compare the second one with the first. Ross is taking too big a rap."

Kennedy is back from a month-long tour of the United States and England with the picture. He says 20 minutes have been cut from the lengthy film, improving it considerably.

"We've all been craving better pictures for years," Kennedy said.

"And during the making of 'Lost Horizon' too many people expected the film to cure all the ills in the business at one time. No picture could take on a responsibility like that.

"When the critics came away disappointed they really lashed out at the picture unfairly."

KENNEDY admits even his friends sidled away from him at the party following the Hollywood premiere.

"I was embarrassed because people were avoiding my eyes," he said, laughing. "I had a couple of drinks and went around telling my friends, 'all right, so you didn't like the picture. But please talk to me.'"

"Rather than say something unkind or innocuous, they didn't speak to me at all."

"While we were shooting the picture I never had the feeling that we were making a great work of art. But the powerful cast and director gave us a great deal of hope. None of us, however, saw the picture until the night of the premiere."

"LOST HORIZON" is G rated. Kennedy thinks audience should accept it as family entertainment — which was the original intent.

"Television and movies both need better entertainment," he said.

"The movie industry has been in the doldrums because it hasn't been providing family films. Take a horrible piece of junk like 'The Last Tango in Paris.'"

"It lures people into theaters to see one of the worst movies I've ever seen. And Brando gives an impossibly bad performance. Really awful. Audiences take a look at that picture and decide to stay away from theatres for months or years.

"You can't begin to compare a rotten picture like that with 'Lost Horizon.'"

"My family, including my 10 and 7-year-old kids, enjoyed 'Lost Horizon.'"

We can watch it together, as we can a television show.

"That's why you see so many people going to see certain pictures over and over again — including 'Lost Horizon.'"

Jack to join in year-long celebration by Warner Bros.

By BOB THOMAS

BURBANK (AP) — It all began with a bicycle shop run by four brothers in Youngstown, Ohio. Today Warner Bros. does a half-billion-dollar business yearly bringing movie, television and music entertainment to the world.

Fifty years ago last month, Sam, Harry, Albert and Jack Warner formed Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. Their successors have planned a year-long celebration of the event, starting with the appearance of five new films at the Cannes Film Festival this month.

BETTE DAVIS

music; a television special; traveling fashion shows.

One of the founding brothers remains: Jack L. Warner, who sold his interest in the company in 1966 and became an independent producer.

"We are very hopeful that he will take part in the celebration," said a company executive, "and he has indicated that he will."

J.L., who enjoys telling jokes to audiences more than Bob Hope, could scarcely resist. He is, after all, the last remaining link to a vastly colorful chapter in entertainment history.

in Germany," based on the experiences of Ambassador James W. Gerard. Wartime audiences flocked to it.

Shortly after forming Warner Bros. Pictures in 1923, Jack Warner discovered their first big star: a German shepherd named Rin Tin Tin.

Warner Bros. was only a minor threat to the big film companies until the historic date of Oct. 6, 1927. That was the premiere in New York of "The Jazz Singer," in which Al Jolson spoke dialogue for the first time in a major film. The film started the revolution from silents to talkies, and Warner Bros. had a head start.

In 1929, the company turned out 81 movies, most of them highly forgettable. But the 1930s brought the real flowering of Warner Bros.

MORE than any other studio, Warners caught the temper of the times. The gangster era was depicted in "Little Caesar" and "Public Enemy."

Musicals like "42nd Street" and the "Goldfishers" series captured the brassy tempo of the 1930s. The nation's social conscience was evidenced in "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang" and "They Won't Forget."

The Warners stars seemed to possess more vitality than those of other studios: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, James Cagney, Edward G. Robinson, Errol Flynn, Paul Muni, Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell.

As in World War I, Warners portrayed the growing German menace with "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." During the war, the studio turned out a host of war films: "Air Force," "Destination Tokyo," "This Is the Army," "Action in the North Atlantic."

JAMES CAGNEY

HUMPHREY BOGART

Warner Bros.' prosperity continued into the postwar years with such hits as "Treasure of the Sierra Madre," "A Streetcar Named Desire," "The Nun's Story," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" "My Fair Lady," "Bonnie and Clyde."

BUT in the 1960s it seemed apparent that Jack Warner had lost his enthusiasm for guiding a film company through the troubled new times. He sold his interest to Seven Arts, which in 1969 sold out to Kinney National Service.

As for Jack Warner, he continues to be active at 81. Last year he produced "1776" and "Dirty Little Billy" as an independent.

A special on Watergate

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

An hour-long special on Watergate will be presented at 6 p.m. Sunday on CBS-TV (Channel 2), preempting the network's "60 Minutes" for that day.

Titled "The Senate and the Watergate Affair," the CBS News special report will offer an analysis and a preview of the Senate hearings on the matter.

Dan Rather, CBS News White House correspondent, will anchor the broadcast and will be joined by correspondents Roger Mudd, Daniel Schorr and Fred Graham.

Members of the select committee of the Senate which is scheduled to begin hearings into the many ramifications of the Watergate case next week will appear on the program, including its chairman, Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C.

And, on "Meet the Press" Sunday afternoon at 2:30 on NBC (Channel 4), Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the ranking Republican on the committee, will be the day's guest.

Sen. Baker will be interviewed by four newsmen, with NBC News correspondent Bill Monroe as moderator.

SAM YORTY and his challenger for the mayor's office in Los Angeles, Councilman Tom Bradley, will meet in another televised debate Sunday.

Their latest clash will air on a special expanded edition of "Eyewitness" from 7 to 8 p.m. Sunday on KABC-TV (Channel 7). The debate will be taped in the afternoon.

The format will be question-and-answer, with the questions to be asked by John Schubeck and Dick Carlson of the KABC-TV news staff. Both candidates will have an opportunity to respond to each question. There will be no commercials within the program.

KABC radio (790) also will carry the debate from 7 to 8 p.m. Sunday.

From 8 to 9 p.m. Sunday, Mayor Yorty and Councilman Bradley will be guests on a special hour-long presentation of "Newsfront — Los Angeles" on radio station KFI (640). Each will have a half hour to present his views.

TENNIS FANS are in for a big day of TV-watching Sunday. From 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., NBC will present the finals of the World Championship Tennis playoffs in Dallas. Last year's final, in which Ken Rosewall defeated Rod Laver, attracted the largest number of TV viewers ever recorded for a tennis event.

NBC is predicting that Sunday's audience will be even bigger. But it will be interesting to find out if the finals of a major tournament between two top men pros will attract as many viewers as Sunday's match between 55-year-old Bobby Riggs and 30-year-old women's star Margaret Court at San Diego Country Estates.

The $10,000 winner-take-all challenge contest pitting a male champion of the late 1930s and '40s against one of the two best women players of today will be carried on CBS from 12:30 to 2 p.m. And the novelty of the "Battle of the Sexes" has stirred more talk than any other tennis event I can recall.

May the better chauvinist win.

A DOWNEY YOUTH, Donald Schlack, is one of three 17-year-old students who will appear with host Walter Cronkite on "What's Skylab All About?" at 3:30 p.m. today on CBS.

The CBS News special, aimed at young people, will take a look at the complex 100-ton Skylab to be launched Monday from Cape Kennedy and the objectives of the earth-orbiting manned space station.

Among the approximately 270 experiments Skylab will be carrying out are 25 suggested by young people. The Downey youth proposed one to discover how a plant grows when there's no gravity. He hopes to find out how the roots and stem of rice plants might grow in zero gravity, and whether light can substitute for gravity.

A ONE-HOUR documentary designed to answer many questions Americans have about U.S. space programs, "Space and the Age of Aquarius," will air at 5 p.m. Sunday on Channel 5. Hugh O'Brian is narrator and Jonathan Winters portrays Doubting Thomases through the ages.

Fortunate plan ahead

By DON CAMPBELL
You're sitting there one day minding your own business and deiving a few shrimp when you suddenly realize that "tomorrow" has crept up on you. That's the way retirement erupts for most of us, but a fortunate few have planned ahead.

Q: I am a 62-year-old widow with the following assets: $42,000 in regular savings plus a $25,000 insurance policy that will be paid to me in full within a few days. I also own a home which could be sold for at least $20,000 and, at present, I hold a job which nets me about $6,000 a year.

I understand that, on retirement, I would be eligible to collect the highest amount paid by Social Security (I would be collecting on my deceased husband's earnings, rather than mine). I have been seriously contemplating selling my home and moving to a small town in Florida. I am a teacher and would be willing to do some substitute teaching to supplement my income.

Does this idea seem feasible to you or should I forget the whole thing and

home?

A: It sounds reasonable enough to me. Assuming that you buy a new home in Florida outright for about the same price as the one you are selling ($20,000) you'll still have $67,000 available for investment.

And, tucked away in good grade corporate bonds yielding about 7½ per cent, you'll have an annual income of roughly $5,025, or $415 a month. Added to your Social Security benefits of $335 a month this will give you a gross monthly income of about $750.

Substitute teaching would provide you with a few more creature comforts, perhaps, but — with your home paid for and, presumably, a more leisurely life style — it shouldn't really be necessary.

the warrants you see listed expire in May, 1976, and so you'll be seeing that "Wt" notation for quite awhile.

Q: WHAT do you think of a mutual fund that: (1) purchased 30,000 shares of a stock at $34 a share in March 1972 and is still holding 29,000 shares of it with a value of $10 a share and (2) had a turnover rate of 71 per cent in 1971 and 58 per cent in 1972? Can the management of a fund be sued?

A: Theoretically, almost anyone can be sued. Winning the suit is something else again. I'll grant you that this fund's management has demonstrated near-brilliance in the extent of its bad judgement, and the volume of its trading has been a bit on the frenzied side.

I quite agree with you, too, that this is something of a classic in the field of advanced blundering, but I doubt very much if you'd have any success unless you could prove some sort of duplicity here. Stupidity, alone, won't quite cut it.

Q: MOST stocks, after splitting, trade at two prices for a period of time, one at the new price (W.T.) and at the old price. Why does Chrysler, which split 2 for 1 many years ago, still carry two prices (one which is "W.T.")?

A: You've got your symbols (used in the stock tables) mixed up. — or, perhaps, you're the victim of a typographical error.

Between the time that a stock split is announced, and the time it becomes payable, the stock bears the notation "Wi" (when issued) in addition to the price quoted on the outstanding stock.

The notation you see after the second listing for Chrysler ("Wt") stands for "warrants" — the right to buy the company's stock at a specified price for a specified period of time (or even indefinitely). In Chrysler's case

Authors speak out

THE SECRETARIAL GHETTO, by Mary Kathleen Benet. McGraw-Hill, $5.95.

This book should have some impact in the Southland with its uncounted thousands of Girl Fridays. The author is quite frank about the problems, sociological and otherwise, in the office. And not only is she outspoken, but some of what she writes could be termed downright controversial.

Every year thousands of American girls look for secretarial jobs, confidently anticipating the good pay, pleasant working conditions, interesting fellow workers and excellent chances of advancement promised by the classified ads.

Only too many wind up in what the author calls the "Ghetto."

Ms Benet has worked in many offices on both sides of the Atlantic, including those of the San Francisco Chronicle, the Chicago Sun-Times, McCall's and a book publishing house. She has also been a journalist, advertising copywriter and a literary agent.

As she notes, well over 60 per cent of American office workers are women. But the sheer force of their numbers and the variety of tasks they perform, they have become indispensable to the smooth functioning of American business.

How many receive the recognition they deserve? What does a secretary's job really mean today? Does it bring independence and fulfillment? Or does it perpetuate, in a new setting, a whole range of stereotyped female roles, all subservient to the functions and prerogatives of the male?

The book tackles these questions straight on.—RLD

FIVE KEYS TO PRODUCTIVITY AND PROFITS, by A. Gordon Bratt. Parker, $7.95.

The question often has been asked here in Southern California plants: How can managers raise department productivity and profits to new highs in the face of rising costs?

The answers may be found in this new book, in which the author reveals his five-step master plan for increasing employee performance, reducing turnover, instituting major cost-cutting programs, improving product quality and increasing sales.

The book contains scores of up-to-the-minute techniques and methods for encouraging people to increase their output, including 30 powerful motivators that Bratt says "work like magic" because they trigger people's most basic desires.—RLB.

ACCOUNTING, LEGAL AND TAX ASPECTS OF CORPORATE ACQUISITIONS, by Joseph R. Guardino. Prentice-Hall, $24.95.

Here in the Southland, new stock issues and company mergers are in the back of many high corporate minds.

Sometimes, however, in this complex world of mergers, the problems—unforeseen—can be several, and sticky.

Just how can members of an acquisition team avoid the pitfalls of present tax and legal requirements governing corporate reorganizations, mergers, consolidations and acquisitions?

Most of the answers can be found in this new volume, written by a leading tax expert.

Coverage includes such areas as setting the stage for successful acquisition, solving legal problems of corporate acquisitions, accounting aspects of corporate acquisitions, statutory merger vs consolidation, the stock for stock reorganization, pitfalls to avoid in divisive reorganizations, managing tax loss carryovers with expertise, typical situations resulting in reduced tax liability and corporate

In addition, the reader will discover checklists, tax planning suggestions, charts, forms, numerous illustrations, citations of court decisions and IRS rulings.—RLB.

INDUSTRIAL MATHEMATICS WITH CHARTS, FORMULAS AND TABLES, by Harry W. Muni. Prentice-Hall, $21.50.

More books are being brought out than ever before which delve into the many problems of management in a computer age.

This is one of the better ones to date.

How can management people find the mathematical formulas, charts and tables they need to improve their firm's profit picture, without searching through multi-volume texts or digging through file drawers filled with old calculations?

Most of the answers can be found in this book.

This brings together, in one volume, all of the most frequently called-for formulas, tables and charts used to solve industrial management problems. It's packed solid with scores of ready-to-use formulas on supervision control, job evaluation, merit ratings, wage incentives, cost control, manpower planning, payroll control, production scheduling, work standards, production economics, work sampling, quality control, work flow, materials handling, inventory control, plant site selection, space utilization, plant layout and building services.

What's more, the book provides dozens of worked-out examples showing how each formula should be applied to specific problems.—RLB.

Geologists meet in Anaheim confab

Spurred by debate over the energy crisis, advance registrations are said to be running heavy for the annual convention of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists in Anaheim Convention Center Monday through Wednesday.

A highlight will be the Tuesday luncheon appearance of Dr. Harrison Schmitt, geologist-astronaut who walked on the moon during the Apollo 17 mission, but the rest of the three-day meeting will be devoted to the structure of the earth and how to find more oil, gas and other needed minerals in it.

Keynote address, dealing with federal oil policy, will be by Charles J. DiBona, President Nixon's new special assistant for energy. DiBona, a former military analyst, was one of the architects of the President's recent message to Congress on energy policy.

The role of government in the energy crisis will be further discussed by Sen. Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo., and Assistant Secretary of the Interior Stephen A. Wakefield, who will open an all-day session on the economics of energy minerals Tuesday.

Other speakers on this panel will discuss the supply and cost of energy from coal, uranium and other sources as well as oil and gas.

County on the Buena Park Le Baron and the San Jose Le Baron, both of which will open later this year.

Groundbreaking for the Dallas Le Baron is scheduled this month.

Riley said each of the new multi-million dollar complexes will feature from 300 to 500 rooms with complete facilities to serve the convention market and business community.

House-sized, windmill-like Skylab a many-sided ship

AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Skylab, America's first space station, is a hotel, a laboratory, a solar observatory, a medical research facility and an earth resources satellite all jammed into a rocket stage and made to look like a flying windmill.

The space station is 118 feet long and contains 12,398 cubic feet, about the space found in a 1,600 square foot, three-bedroom house. It's the largest man-rated spacecraft ever launched.

To build it, the space agency essentially took the third stage of the Apollo rocket stack and installed living quarters for three astronauts, added the experiments and then installed a solar telescope. Also attached are four solar arrays — the windmill-like arms — on the telescope, and two wing-like solar arrays attached to the station.

The Skylab is scheduled to be launched into orbit 270 miles above earth on Monday, with astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz to rendezvous with it the following day.

Skylab is composed of four basic components, plus the Apollo command and service module which is used to ferry astronauts to and from the station.

The largest section of Skylab is housed in the back of the craft, which is the bottom as it sits on the launch pad. This is the area of the rocket stage which normally would contain the propellant tanks.

This section, called the orbital workshop, is divided into a two-story cabin by the addition of open-grid floors and ceilings.

Quarters for the three-man crew, including kitchen, bedrooms, waste management compartment and an experiment area are located in the aft end of the workshop.

Upstairs in the workshop is a storage and work area. It contains science equipment, a food freezer, water storage tanks and film vaults.

Below the crew quarters, in an area which in the rocket stage contained a liquid oxygen tank, is a trash and waste tank. Astronauts dump garbage into it through an airlock in the floor of the crew quarters.

The wing-like solar panels are attached to the side of the orbital workshop.

Forward of the workshop is the airlock module, a staging area for astronauts performing a space walk. It also contains the control equipment for the heat, air, electricity and communications for the entire Skylab system.

Next to the airlock module is the multiple docking adapter. This is the port of entry to Skylab for the astronauts. The Apollo command service module docks at one of two ports of the adapter and the spacemen crawl through a hatch to enter the space station.

The adapter also contains the controls for the solar observatory equipment and for the earth resources instruments. There are also four windows designed to permit the astronauts to take pictures and to make observations.

Atmosphere in Skylab is a mixture of oxygen and nitrogen at five pounds per square inch, a little more than a third of sea-level atmospheric pressure on earth.

The two sets of solar arrays provide most of the power for Skylab. By converting solar energy into electricity, the panels can generate up to 21,000 watts of power, about the amount used by five three-bedroom houses.

The solar arrays are launched folded up in tight bundles. Fifteen minutes after the spacecraft achieves orbit, the windmill-like blades are deployed, unfolding to their full 43-foot length and giving Skylab its windmill appearance.

Sixteen minutes later, the second set of solar panels unfold, creating "wings" 31 by 27 feet in size.

Saturn 5 exits with a bang

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Science Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. — When the Skylab space station is lofted into space May 14, it might mark the farewell performance by the world's most powerful rocket, the Saturn 5.

On 11 earlier launchings, all successful, the rockets has thrilled millions in the Cape Kennedy area as it thundered into the sky, shaking the ground for miles around and carving a fiery path with its 2,200-foot plume of flame.

Its most dramatic performance came last December on its first nighttime launch, as it sent the Apollo 17 astronauts toward the moon.

Originally, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration built 15 of the big boosters, all for the Apollo program. Then budget restraints forced cancellation of three moon missions.

One of the leftover Saturn 5s was assigned to boost the unmanned Skylab into orbit. The other two have been placed in mothballs, with no foreseeable launching assignment.

There is a possibility if the first Skylab fails that NASA might launch a backup next year, using one of the Saturn 5s in storage.

Smaller Saturn 1B rockets will hoist the three astronaut crews which are to inhabit the Skylab station for periods up to eight weeks this year. The Saturn 1B also will be used to loft three American astronauts into space in 1975 to link up with a Russian Soyuz craft flown by two cosmonauts.

Those are the only U.S. man-in-space flights planned between now and 1978 when the space shuttle will begin test flights from Cape Kennedy. The shuttle will be the workhorse for the U.S. space effort for the rest of the century and perhaps into the next.

The shuttle, operating much like an airliner, will be able to make 100 or more trips into space before wearing out. Each craft can carry two pilots, as many as 12 passengers and up to 65,000 pounds of cargo.

This reusable vehicle will be able to ferry large space station sections for assembly in space. It will carry almost all unmanned satellites into orbit, and specialized crews can repair or bring back to earth those not working properly.

The cost per launch is estimated at $10.5 million, compared with $445 million for an Apollo launch.

The two Saturn 5s in mothballs, each worth $185 million, are not expected to begin deteriorating in effectiveness until 1981 or 1982, and some thought is being given to using them as boosters for the central elements of a permanent space station once the shuttle is operational.

However, some in NASA cite the $600,000 annual bill for maintaining them in storage as a reason for forgetting about launching them and salvaging parts for use in other programs. No such decision is expected before the fate of Skylab is known.

The Saturn 5 is capable of placing 240,000 pounds in orbit or sending 102,000 pounds to the moon. The Saturn 1B can place 32,000 pounds in orbit.

Russia's most powerful rocket, the SL-13, can place 40,000 pounds in orbit or send 12,000 pounds to the moon.

The Soviets for several years have been developing a rocket capable of orbiting more than 100,000 pounds or sending 40,000 pounds to the moon. U.S. experts say they have met with repeated failure with the booster, called the %5-5. They say the first test flight ended in a launch pad explosion in June, 1969; the second and third with first stage failures in June 1971 and last November.
